Miller Announces Study To Be Made Of Sikeston

City Manager Raymert Miller disclosed yesterday that a comprehensive study is to be made of Sikeston and the "probable future urban area of the city" by Harland Bartholomew and Associates, a planners engineering company from St. Louis.

Miller said he study would cover a period between now and 1985 and would include "at least" all of the area within one mile of the city limits.

Eldridge Lovelace, who is in charge of the St. Louis office, said the plan would follow a basic three - step procedure.

ONE--"Representatives from this office would come to Sikeston to make necessary surveys of land use traffic, and housing conditions. This will allow the study team to become familiar with existing conditions. Also, from our studies we will prepare a tentative draft of the comprehensive plan. From the drafts, we will hold discussions with local officials, and with the City Council and Planning Commission.

TWO -- "Following such discussions, we would make whatever modifications were deemed appropriate in the plans. We will then prepare and present a preliminary report about the study. Public meetings and hearings should be held for discussion of the report. A citizens advisory committee should be established for the purpose of reviewing the plan.

THREE -- "Following the public study, the plan as modified should be officially adopted. Following a period of 18 months after initiation of work, the plan would be brought up - to - date and we would submit the final report officially adopted."

There will be four "major phases" of the plan, land use, transportation, facilities and a public improvements program.

Work is scheduled to be initiated within two weeks after notification to proceed is issued by the Division of Commerce and Industrial Development.

Lovelace said a "tentative" city plan could be completed within eight months after they were authorized to proceed.

Estimated cost of the study to the city is $4,500. Total cost of the study is expected to be $13,500, two-thirds of which will be financed with federal monies.

Miller said it is considered essential that a city comparable to the size of Sikeston have such studies and evaluations made in order to continue steady and stable growth patterns.

Standard Begins Stoddard County Home Delivery

The Daily Standard this week is beginning home delivery in Stoddard County to supply residents of that area with fresh daily news, Glenn Greene, Standard circulation manager reported.

Towns receiving the home delivery are Gray Ridge, Circle City, Essex, Bloomfield, Advance, Painton, Perkins, Bell City and Dexter, he noted.

In addition rural home delivery is being made on Highway 114 from Morehouse to Dexter, Highway 25 from Dexter to Advance and Routes P, N and Y in Stoddard County, Mr. Greene added.

Residents of Stoddard County will be supplied with fresh news since the papers are taken from the Standard's office at 2:30 p.m. for home delivery outside the Sikeston city limits, he explained.

Dealers distributing the Standard in Stoddard county are Harry Jennings, Dexter; Gertrude Greene, Bloomfield; Lester Swindell, Bell City; Harold Blankenship, Advance, and Cliff Johnson, Gray Ridge.

Persons wishing to receive the home delivery of the Standard may contact their area dealer or mail a card to The Daily Standard, 205 South New Madrid, Sikeston, and the Standard will forward the information to the dealer, Mr. Greene said.

Naylor Store Robbed of $1,000 In Merchandise

NAYLOR - The Murdock Appliance Company was robbed sometime early Tuesday morning, with an estimated $1,000 loss in merchandise, ranging from small to large items.

Among the items taken were television sets, toasters and other electrical appliances. Entrance was gained by tearing a board from the back door.

From evidence at the scene, the patrol believe there were two trucks used to haul away the stolen merchandise.

Don't Follow Fogging Machine

A plea came from City Manager Raymert Miller's office yesterday asking parents to caution their children about following the mosquito fogging machine. He said the children were creating a traffic hazard and hindering the operator of the truck.

Miller also warned that being directly in the line of fire of the fog could prove harmful to a person and his clothing.

Ten Injured

Ten persons were injured in area accidents over the past 24 hours, according to the state patrol.

In an accident Tuesday at 10:15 a.m. on a country lane in Jackson, two cars were involved in an accident on a blind curve, resulting in the arrest of the driver of a 1965 Volkswagen, Billy S. Henderson, 32, route two, Jackson, for careless and imprudent driving.

He struck a 1952 Ford dumptruck, driven by John Kester, 32, also of route two, Jackson. Henderson received cuts on the shoulder and was taken to a Jackson physician.

Hospital Fund Drive Raising Now Declared "Underway"

It was announced today by the Missouri Delta Community Hospital Steering Committee that a fund raising campaign to raise approximately $600,000 to finance construction of the badly needed additional hospital facilities is underway.

Construction will begin very soon on a basement and three floor addition to the present hospital facility. Added services such as cobalt therapy, resident pathological services, intensive care, enlarged emergency facilities, and physical therapy plus an ultimate 90 patient bed addition will be realized through this program.

The actual cost will not be known until bids are received from contractors on June 22, 1966. It is anticipated, however, that cost will exceed $2,000,000.

Efforts to finance this construction program began in May 1964. A Steering Committee consisting of Kenneth Smitton and C. L. "Val" Sharp as Co-Chairman and Kendall Sikes, Robert Matthews, Jim Bogle, Earl Jarvis, Bob Mitchell, George Story, William Gemeinhardt, Harry Dudley and E. P. Coleman, members, was appointed and charged with the responsibility of securing the necessary funds to finance the construction program.

The firm of Buchmueller-Whitworth & Associates was selected by the Board of Directors to design the proposed structure. This firm joined hospital administration in immediately submitting an application for Hill-Harris Funds to the appropriate office in Jefferson City.

The hospital submitted a request for participation in the amount of $1,200,000 with the understanding that as concrete information was compiled, the application would be revised and resubmitted in May 1965.

The Steering Committee realized that the cost of construction would not be lesser than $1,200,000, began an advanced gifts campaign to secure local funds adequate to finance 50 per cent of the original estimate of cost or $600,000. This program was sparked in November 1964 by an announcement from Mr. E. P. Coleman, President of the Board of Directors, that he and Mrs. Coleman had decided to contribute $400,000 to the advanced gifts campaign. After this announcement, interested citizens came forth with their contributions and in a short time the advanced gifts campaign was ended. At this point, it was decided by the Steering Committee that all efforts to raise additional funds would cease until a more accurate estimate of the total cost of construction could be ascertained.

In May 1965, a revised application was submitted to the Hill-Harris office in Jefferson City. Approval of this application has now been received and the hospital has been assured of receiving $915,000 from the Hill-Harris program.

Mr. E. P. Coleman, President of the Board of Directors of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital commented: "The rigors of 24 months negotiation with governmental agencies both on State and Federal levels has been successfully concluded. We have secured maximum Hill-Harris Funds for this project. The time has now come when each citizen of our community will have an opportunity to contribute to this institution which is so necessary to each of us."

In an effort to bring the financing program to a speedy and successful conclusion, a professional fund raising organization has been obtained. The cost for this service is being met by anonymous donors, therefore, all of an individual's contribution will go to the Hospital Building Program.

The campaign headquarters for the hospital fund raising program is located in the old Scott County Milling Company Building adjacent to the Bank of Sikeston Building. Mr. Page Keown, Professional Fund-raising Counselor, who represents the Patrick Organization, Inc., invites the public to drop by and get acquainted.

Mr. Kenneth Smitten and Mr. Val Sharp, Co-Chairmen of the Steering Committee made this comment, "Very soon each citizen will have an opportunity to lend his support to our community hospital. It is impossible to enumerate the benefits to those who have needed and will need its services. How comforting it is to know that life-saving equipment, drugs, and know-how are maintained so immediately accessible to all of us."

Mr. Coleman commented: "I know of nothing really worthwhile that can be bought cheaply. Whether the purchase price is measured in terms of work hours or dollars, it is one and the same thing. Our hospital is vital to those of our community. New industry would not consider coming to Sikeston without an adequate health facility. Present industry probably would not have chosen Sikeston if our hospital had not been available for their employees. It is most important that each of us get behind and support the needs of this most worthwhile institution. Whether our reasons be economic or personal, they are most important."

Rain Damages Crops

EAST PRAIRIE -- Sam Tanksley, energetic trucker and produce raiser of Mississippi and surrounding counties, stands to lose the majority of his garden produce for this year, following the torrential rains.

Nevertheless, there is always a spark of optimism about Sam, who expects to recoup some of his loss by putting out several late summer crops.

Let us suppose that if the average planter put out around 250 acres of potatoes, and lost all but about 95 acres, it would cause many a grower to throw up his hands in disgust.

This is not true with Sam Tanksley, in spite of the huge loss of $240 per acre on his potato crop, which rottened in the fields, due to the long standing of water over his blooming plants.

It so happened that eastern Mississippi county suffered the greatest water damage, causing many farmers with large acreage to lose a good portion of their corn crop and most of their cotton crop.

Tanksley also lost heavily on several patches of watermelons, with only 30 of his total 65 acres salvaged from the heavy rains.

He also suffered a loss of 60 acres of corn; planted near his home at the west city limits of East Prairie. Water stood on the field for many days, covering the 10-inch plants for several days, turning them yellow. The field is an entire loss, as a pre-emerge chemical, atrazine, was used, making it impossible to be replanted to another crop.

He saved several fields of potatoes in the northern part of Scott county on the Eddie Fuchs farm, while a field near Blodgett is still in good condition.

As Tanksley stated, "it was the highest rainfall ever recorded in my memory," and

Gemini Nine Flight Scrubbed For Second Time

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. AP -- The hard-luck Gemini 9 flight was postponed two days today because of last-minute problems that prevented the Titan 2 rocket from being launched.

The space walk and rendezvous mission was rescheduled for 9:39 a.m. EDT Friday.

The flight was called off at 12:40 p.m. as the astronauts, Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan, waited out the countdown while sealed in their cramped Gemini 9 spacecraft atop a nine-story tall Titan 2 rocket.

The target satellite which the astronauts were to chase across the sky had been fired into space at 11 a.m. from another launching pad 6,000 feet away.

"I just can't believe it," said Cernan, a 32-year-old space rookie disappointed for the second straight time in his goal to take the longest space walk in history.

There was a hint of trouble with the target satellite, even though it entered a near perfect circular orbit. Ground stations were unable to confirm that a shroud covering the docking collar had fallen away as planned.

If the shroud did not come off, the astronauts will not be able to link up with the target, but will be able to carry out rendezvous missions.

Until they get within eyesight of the target, they will not know whether the shroud is off.

The guidance problem in the Gemini 9 spacecraft was not discovered until less than two minutes before it was to blast off on a three-day mission.

The countdown on the Titan 2 proceeded smoothly down to 1 minute, 40 seconds before liftoff. Then a hold was called and the count was recycled to three minutes and holding when a new signal was rejected by a computer in the spacecraft.

The guidance signal was designed to adjust the computer so that it would steer the Titan 2 into the proper path to begin the pursuit of the target.

The count was resumed twice in hope of sending the signal through but each time it was rejected.

In order to catch the target today, the Titan 2 would have had to have been launched in a six-minute period ending at 12:44 p.m. EDT.

When it became apparent the condition could not be corrected in time, mission director William C. Schneider called the launch off for two days. The reason is that the target satellite will not be in position for a pursuit until Friday morning.

The space agency will have six minutes to get the Gemini off the ground the first time Friday morning. If that doesn't work, it will have 35 more minutes beginning at 11:15 a.m. the same day.

For Stafford and Cernan, it was the second disappointment in 15 days. On May 17, their flight was scrubbed when an Agena target satellite failed to go into orbit.

For Stafford, it was the fifth trip up to a spacecraft cabin to await a launch, and the fourth time he has been frustrated.

A barrel - shaped satellite rocketed into orbit today but may have remained locked in a fiberglass shroud that would destroy its usefulness as a docking target for the Gemini 9 astronauts.

The launch of the satellite by a fiery Atlas appeared perfect —until information came that the shroud, designed to protect the vehicle from buffeting and heat during the blastoff, may not have dropped away.

The 90-inch, 300-pound shroud covers the collar with which astronauts Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan planned to link up with the satellite late today after a 75,000-mile pursuit.

One hour after the satellite launching, mission control at Houston said there would be no way of determining whether the shroud fell off until Stafford and Cernan approached the satellite for a visual check.

ANOTHER G. I. INVESTMENT

THE NEW G. I. BILL in part is an investment in the younger generation. Many of its provisions went into effect the day the measure was enacted into law -- last March 3. Educational benefits become effective on June 1.

To a degree the new benefits correspond to those provided under earlier G. I. bills, the landmark programs enacted for veterans of World War II and the Korean War. The new law, formally known as the Veterans' Readjustment Benefits Act of 1966, differs in providing somewhat lower cash allowances for education and in stricter eligibility requirements.

A G. I. Bill of Rights for post-Korean veterans had been before Congress for a decade. Passage finally came in February in a whirlwind fashion, with unanimous votes in both houses. Some congressmen said the bill did not do enough.

THE NUMBER of veterans receiving education and training allowances in the first year under the new law will average 251,000 in any given month. This figure will rise to 413,000 by 1970.

The program covers veterans who served on active duty for a period of more than 180 days, any part of which was served after Jan. 31, 1955, and who were discharged or released under conditions other than dishonorable. Benefits will be calculated on the basis of one month of aid for each month, or fraction, of service on active duty.

Eligible veterans discharged before June 1 will have eight years -- until May 31, 1974 -- to complete their programs. Those discharged later may receive educational benefits within eight years from the date of their discharge.

Monthly allowances are designed to meet in part the expenses of the veteran's subsistence, tuition, fees, supplies, books, equipment, and other educational costs. Cold War veterans will find, as did Korean G. I.'s, that the allowances will have to be supplemented by wages, savings, scholarships, or outside assistance. Full-time students will receive cash benefits of $100 a month; with one dependent, $125; with two or more dependents, $150. Part-time students or trainees will receive less.

THE NEW B. I. BILL will cost $358 million in the first year, $245 million more than President Johnson had budgeted for the year beginning July 1. Nevertheless, the President said on March 3: "Because it is for education, I am going to sign this bill, even though it provides hundreds of millions of dollars more than I thought it advisable to recommend or to ask for this year."

Undoubtedly the escalation of the fighting in Viet Nam weighed heavily upon Congress to pass the bill. Some votes may have been affected by a feeling that the new measure compensates, indirectly and only in the future, for a draft system that allows exemption for college students.

But a higher argument is available. The nation spent $14 billion on education for World War II vets, and about $2.4 billion for Korean vets. The first measure was a serendipitous miracle, for it gave America the skilled men and women she urgently needed in the aftermath of war. And the Veterans Administration concludes that the first G. I. Bill alone is paying for itself at close to $1 billion a year -- in the additional income taxes paid by those educated veterans.

ALLEY OOP, ATTENTION!

Time machines have been a favorite device of writers from H. G. Wells to V. T. Hamlin, creator of "Alley Oop."

Now a mechanical engineer comes along to say the idea isn't so fictional after all, that engineers already have a time machine of sorts at their disposal.

It is not, alas, something you can climb into and zip back and forth through history in, using a calendar for a speedometer. It is simply an ordinary analogue computer.

Computer operators already "travel" through time quite routinely, says Prof. Joseph E. Shigley of the University of Michigan. They begin a problem with time equal to zero (the present) but speed up the computations of the events they are investigating so that they take place faster than normally. Thus they are, in effect, looking into the future.

But apparently everyone has overlooked the fact that an analogue computer can also make time run backwards, says the professor.

Eureka! he cries. All an operator has to do is set up his program in the usual way as though he were going to operate with normal time flow -- that is, from present to future. Then he just places an inverter -- a simple electronic gismo that converts signals from positive to negative -- at the output of every integrator in the computer circuit. His time events will then run in reverse.

All kinds of interesting situations can then be analyzed, notes Shigley. "An automotive or aircraft collision is a typical investigative problem. One begins with the accident and solves the problem backwards in time to learn why it happened."

EXIT POUND, ENTER DOLLAR

The sun continues to set on the British currency system, with its inscrutable array of pence, shillings, crowns, and guineas. Australia, Sierra Leone and South Africa are only a few of the few British dependencies which have switched to decimal currency in recent years. The Bahamas, still very much a colony, will follow suit on Wednesday, May 25.

Because of its large tourist trade, the Bahamas has long operated on a dual currency of pounds and shillings for residents, dollars and cents for American visitors. This system probably will remain in effect. It would not be surprising, though, if Americans chose to use the attractively designed Bahamian dollars instead of their own.

The Bahamian five-dollar piece is the biggest silver coin -- both in dimension and denomination -- ever issued in the Western Hemisphere. Composed of 92.5 per cent fine silver, the five dollar cartwheel measures nearly one and three-quarters inches in diameter. The two-dollar, one-dollar and 5-cent coins also are silver. The remaining coins, predominantly of nickel or copper, are in denominations of 1,5,10, 15 and 25 cents. All are round except the 10-cent piece, which has a scalloped edge, and the 15-cent piece, which is square.

The days of the 20-shilling pound are clearly numbered. New Zealand plans to adopt the decimal system in 1967. And it is only a matter of time before Great Britain itself bows to the inevitable. A Committee of Inquiry on Decimal Currency recommended three years ago that the pound retain its present value and appearance but that it be divided into 100 cents. For psychological as well as technical reasons, the changeover in Britain may be more leisurely than elsewhere.

TEXAS -- ALL MINK AND A YARD WIDE

If you get a certain letter this week from Neiman-Marcus Company, which owns that Dallas department store, you can count yourself among 1,500 of the "wealthiest people in the world." The letter is a tender of the "finest mink coast in the world." It will sell for about $80,000, special order.

The Dallas store early in May bought 40 skins of the new Black Willow mink for $1,100 each, or $44,000, from the Hudson's Bay Fur Company at auction. According to the N. Y. Herald Tribune (May 7, 1966) Stanley Marcus, president of the store, "whistled when he heard the price, wished Mr. (George J.) Liebes (the buyer) luck, but came to New York (the next day) . . . just to see the skins."

Expensive coats are nothing new for NM. Some years ago it whipped up -- and sold -- a Sapphire or Cerulean mink at $40,000. For sable, poker goes up. The store has already hit the $80,000 neighborhood, which is a very nice neighborhood indeed, with sable.

The prospective buyers for the 80-grand mink job will be culled from the store's famous Christmas catalogue mailing list. This is the deal which offered several years ago a confidential shopping service for "customers who find themselves in the position of sending gifts to those in high position -- kings, shahs, maharajahs, prime ministers, and other dignitaries." Billing was to be by telephone only, and the nature of the gifts was to be divulged "only on a court subpeona."

Last year NM offered its clientele, among other things, a three-litre flacon of Shalimar perfume at a quick $2,500. But the vintage year for Neiman-Marcus was probably 1959, when the store offered its select list a gift-wrapped Black Angus steer, with roast beef serving cart, for $1,925.

By PHIL THOMAS

Which isn't a bad idea.

We have no idea what the movie is about, but its title could be a spur to the credit card economy.

Why not be able to rent a girl? And on credit.

It might help your career if you could.

That's because so many of the giant corporations are becoming more and more interested in the lives of their executives. They're no longer content to know all they can just about the man, they also want to know all about his wife.

And, often, the man might miss a coveted push up the executive ladder because, even though he meets all the firm's requirements, his wife doesn't.

Suppose you've got the kind of wife who likes to stay home nights and read the collected works of Shakespeare rather than going out on the town. This is fine in its fashion. But suppose you've also got a boss who's a swinger, a real drink-it-up, laugh-it-up until five o'clock in the morning kind of guy. He also is the guy who decides whether you get the promotion. And he decides he wants to meet your wife over dinner and drinks before making a decision about you.

What do you do? You know your wife will hate him, and he'll hate her. Don't panic. Just call your friendly "rent-a-wife" dealer. He'll put the proper wife in the party seat. Show him your credit card it might be expensive but you've got 30 days to pay and he'll run your request through a computer. In less than a minute it will pick out just the right woman to impress your boss- a fast-drinking, quick-laughing, redhead who can show your leader how to Watusi without giving him a heart attack.

You can pick up your "wife" yourself or she can be delivered, and in plenty of time for you to fill her in on what the boss expects in the wife of a rising junior executive.

The nicest thing is that when the evening is done and the sun is coming up you just return your rented wife to the store and drive on home to your real one.

No muss, no fuss, no bother.

Alarmed by the fact that over 500 persons have been killed in Missouri traffic accidents during the first five months of the year, Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, the Highway Patrol Superintendent, has called upon motorists to take a second look at their driving habits.

"Most drivers want to be known as good drivers," he declared. "Any driver who wants to start his own safety campaign, can begin by checking habits. Being a good driver not only means driving with care, but also of being considerate of other drivers on the streets and highways."

Colonel Hockaday pointed out that characteristics of a good driver include keeping a safe distance behind other vehicles, slowing down when necessary for vehicles passing, dimming lights for oncoming traffic and sounding the horn when passing.

Courtesy on the highway is a good way to increase traffic safety. One thoughtless act can endanger the lives of many. "There are close to 90 million registered vehicles in the United States--over two million of them are right here in Missouri," the Colonel said. "With this potential traffic flow, everyone should realize that he must share the road and extend the same consideration to his fellow drivers as he would expect from them."

The Patrol Superintendent also pointed out that emotions often get the upper hand while driving. This may result in taking chances when confronted with a slow-poke, road hog or speedster. He stated that by accepting the fact that such drivers do exist and may be encountered unexpectedly, one is better adjusted emotionally for safer driving.

"You will probably be driving quite a bit during the next few months," Colonel Hockaday concluded. "I urge you to take stock of your driving habits and do everything possible to avoid a traffic accident."

ON WISHFUL THINKING

Nationalist China's UN Ambassador Liu Chieh has warned the free world that the so-called "split" between Red China and the USSR involves only a private quarrel over whether Moscow or Peiping is to be Red GHQ, and that the two are a greater threat to freedom today than ever before.

"The internationalist Communist movement," he said, "Cannot be contained by an exchange of trade, by a gesture of good will, by any formula of peaceful co-existence . . . . .Recent history shows that the free world is not containing the Communist world. On the contrary the Communist world has not only contained the free world, but has penetrated deeply into vast power in the developing areas of the world."

Ambassador Liu blasted our independence on status quo. "It is not an effective response to the militant challenge of the Communists," he said, "it is a disheartening echo to the silent cry of the millions behind the Iron and Bamboo curtains."

In the face of stepped-up Communist penetration in Asia, Africa and Latin-America, and in the light of our less-than-brilliant performance in South Vietnam, we, and the other free nations should face up to our need of what the Ambassador called a "dynamic policy."

And Red China's recent broad hint of nuclear capability and the development of Russia's Cuban operating base should remind us that time is running out.

H. L. Hunt Says

THE RULE OF LAW

Several years have now passed since the strange idea began to be widely heard in our land that to break the law might be a noble act. At first directed toward a tragic situation in the relations of white and Negro Americans which had roused vehement emotions, this doctrine gained the sympathy of many good people who should have known better. Now they are beginning to realize its true meaning and inevitable consequence.

From "civil rights" protest, organized and deliberate flouting of the law has quickly become a standard tactic of political agitators for a great variety of unsavory causes. It is openly encouraged by the opponents of our war against communism in Viet Nam. It is even being used by those who protest the basic community standards of common decency.

Law, like freedom is indivisible. No part of it can be brought into public disrespect without all obedience to law suffering as a result. If a man may break a trespass law or a draft law because he personally disapproves of it, then he may rob and loot and rape and kill as well. He can count on finding many to defend him because of vague "pressures from society" which they say he is rebelling against.

The breakdown of the rule of law which began when distinguished Americans endorsed illegal demonstrations and trespassing led to the carnival of crime and destruction in Watts last August.

Now many Americans are taking a second look at the doctrine of "civil disobedience," and some who previously championed it are coming out in opposition. We may take heart from this rediscovery of reason. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Having made such a botch of their case in public senate hearings on auto safety, auto executives are now trying to do a better job in the closed - door sessions of the Senate Commerce committee.

This is where senators whip together the safety law which the auto industry will have to obey. Auto executives were not permitted inside the hearings. However, this column can report what happened last week, namely, that the industry has won over three key senators, all Democrats, who served in effect as auto spokesmen inside the closed - door sessions. They were:

Howard Cannon, Nevada, heretofore a tough advocate of auto safety, but who has been won over by his friend, Louis Spits, also of Nevada, chairman of the vehicle equipment safety commission, which is industry dominated.

Phil Hart of Detroit, a great champion of the consumer when it comes to truth - in - packaging, but now a genteel spokesman for Michigan's No. 1 industry -- automobiles.

Chief defenders of the public inside the closed - door hearing were Chairman Warren Magnuson, Wash., Maurine Neuberger, Ore., Russell Long, La., all Democrats, with Norris cotton, N. H., Republican.

SKILLED AUTO LOBBYISTS

Working frantically but skillfully on the outside were auto industry attorney Lloyd Cutter and Rodney Markley, Ford public relations man, who went from congressional office to office, endeavoring to soften the committee's proposal that auto companies which make dangerous or faulty cars be held criminally responsible.

Cutler and Markley indicated this was an insult to the auto industry, wanted no criminal liability at all. They called on almost every member of the Senate and House Commerce committees, plus Sens. Bobby Kennedy, D- N. Y., Abe Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Walter Mondale, D-Minn., who are not on the commerce committee.

Chief argument of the auto industry senators in the closed-door session was states rights. They argued that standards for building safer cars should be left to the vehicle equipment safety commission, an organization of state vehicle men who are close to the auto industry and receive hospitable entertainment at annual conventions.

Sen. Magnuson vigorously opposed state control. He argued the states should be consulted but that fixing safety standards must be the job of the federal government; he also argued that the secretary of commerce must be given a certain date for fixing safety standards; there could be no long delays.

RUSSELL LONG'S ROLL

Sen. Russell Long, who is new to the commerce committee, recalled that when he was in college he went driving with four of his friends in a convertible. They had nothing to drink, he emphasized. But a tire blew out and the car rolled over four times.

"We were able to walk away from that accident because that car's construction included a center post," said the senator from Louisiana. "Today if we had rolled over in one of the hardtop convertibles, we would have been killed. They look strong but don't have this center post."

Sen. Lausche got very excited about fins and hood ornaments. He said he was in favor of safety and he didn't think much of these "daggers and swords" on the outside of the car because he knew what they could do.

Sen. Cannon chimed in to say that he saw a little girl stabbed to death by a fin. When her tricycle rolled off the curb, the car fin went through her heart.

Sen. Mondale brought up his amendment to require the industry to notify purchasers of car defects -- not merely the dealers. Action on this was deferred.

Chairman Magnuson indicated that President Johnson wants a tough safety bill and the senator obviously agreed with him. He expressed the hope that the committee sessions would not drag out as long as the seven truth - in - packaging sessions. The next auto meeting is today (June 1).

Magnuson did not say so, but this is probably the most important public safety bill ever to be considered by his committee.

Note -- Gov. George Romney of Michigan will come to Washington Friday as a member of the Governor's Traffic Safety committee to call on the White House and the House and Senate Commerce committees to appeal for states rights for auto manufacturing standards. This will find Romney in an interesting position. He has talked a lot about safety standards but, as former head of American Motors, he always veers around to the industry position.

AUTO SAFETY

One overlooked factor in traffic safety is improper street lighting, says the ex-mayor of Louisville, Charles R. Farnsley, now a Democratic congressman from Kentucky.

"When I was first elected mayor of Louisville, I found that some of the lights had been turned off during World War II and never turned on again. So we doubled the amount of street lighting and reduced both accidents and crimes of violence.

"If our streets are adequately lighted, it will cut juvenile delinquency and crimes of violence in half and reduce auto accidents by a third."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Washington, D. C.: -- It will be "either airlines or guidelines," according to a leader of the big machinists' union which expects to strike the commercial flying business at the apogee of the jet season, July fourth to the sixth.

This chap was as blunt as he was witty. At least five major airlines will stay down, said he, unless the President's wage guidelines go up.

Strikes are not exactly "busting out all over" because it is June.

But the work stoppages come swifter now. Transportation paralysis on the land as in the air threatens, as labor leaders attempt to get their contracts in before some sort of war controls are rushed into effect.

It was frankly put by a federal official at an off-the-record briefing of foreign labor attaches in the Labor Dept. last Thursday (May 26). Our government briefs foreign service people here just as other capitals brief our embassy staffs abroad.

"The strike position in the U. S. today is a total of 233 strikes of which 42 are in construction," said the conciliation expert, Walter Maggiolo.

Then came an analysis of the stoppages.

One, in and around Chicago, started on April 11th by tying up one billion dollars' worth of construction, of which a hundred million was "in roads and highways."

But it is not the nature of the strikes which now really counts. It is the nature of the men who lead them.

These union chiefs are the militants.

Look where you will on the strike front, and you will find the men who have been making the mass headlines though most of these leaders are almost unknown to the public.

If one looks past the five airlines (Eastern, National, Northwest, TWA and United) threatened with a July 4th stoppage by the machinsts' tough national vice president, Joe Ramsey, the observer will find American Airlines and Pan American World Airways right on the sights of another union later this summer and fall.

Tackling these carriers is a team which had America hysterical earlier this year--the Transport Workers Union men who called the signals in the New York City transit stoppage.

This will be their first big test without the late Mike Quill's great sense of drama and strategy. Of course, the team is anxious to deliver to their men in this first test of leadership.

The team itself has the natural built-in rivalries and ambitions as well as talents. They are "Mike's" successors: President Guinan; and secretary-treasurer, the white - hot Douglas Mac Mahon (who stepped in when Quill and Guinan went to prison); and his not-so-silent partner of that turbulence, Jim Horst, now executive vice president and director of the union's Air Transport Division.

They're talking strike -- unless they get a 30 per cent wage increase, double and triple time for overtime and a reduction in the work week without loss of pay. Tens of thousands are involved on both lines.

It is the mood of the moment not merely to smash the 3.2 per cent wage guidelines but to grind them down under heavy percentages.

Understanding this will mean understanding the taut springs from which the summer headlines will pop. Just watch the railroads in a few weeks. The big railroad trainmen's union led by Charlie Luna, a man who in less than a decade will be in labor's high command, wants 25 per cent wage hike now and lots more in fringes. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers want a 30 to 33 1-3 per cent boost and some fancy fringes.

There is the rival Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen leader, H. E. Gilbert, who now says: More strikes will be necessary in the industry to get what we want. He pulled a surprise four-day stoppage last March against eight railroads.

If critical transport gets hung on the picket line, other industries will not be far behind. Unions everywhere, lining up for the grinding of the guidelines, are in everything from construction (this is the year of the carpenters) to cargo hauling, to longshoring to electronics in almost 1,000 plants and installations.

Mr. Johnson may have to make another "cool it" speech -- and this time not to the intellectuals.

He's now dealing with a tougher school.

Cards Defeat Astros

By BEN BROWN
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS AP -- "We're finally getting the breaks," says manager Red Schoendienst of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Redbirds won their fourth straight game and 12th in the last 19 starts Tuesday night, whipping Houston 3-0, behind the five- hit pitching of Ray Washburn and Hal Woodeshick.

"We're getting good pitching and Orlando Cepeda is doing a great job for us," the Cardinal manager continued, delighted that in the last four games the Cardinals have allowed only four runs.

"Cepeda's big bat in the middle of the lineup has given us a big boost," Schoendienst said. Since joining the Cards May 8 in the trade that sent Pitcher Ray Sadecki to the Giants, Cepeda has hit at a .362 clip.

Tuesday night, the Redbirds rallied for their three runs after two were out in the fifth inning.

Back - to - back singles by Lou Brock, Bobby Tolan and Curt Flood were the big blows.

Flood's single to short centerfield fell between several onrushing Houston players and the speedy Tolan scored from first on the play.

Houston played the game under protest after the fifth inning. Manager Grady Hatton protested when home plate Umpire Mel Steiner ejected catcher John Bateman for objecting to a called third strike.

Steiner threw Bateman out of the game for remarks he made from the dugout. "Bateman did not say a word from the bench," Hatton said.

St. Louis will host Los Angeles and Sandy Koufax tonight. Al Jackson will start for the Cards.

matter of fact

The term "fifth column," which implies a ruse similar in military terms to that of the ancient Trojan horse, originated during the Spanish civil war in the late 1930s. When four rebel army columns were moving on Madrid, a general referred to his militant supporters within the Spanish capital as his "fifth column," intent on undermining resistance from within.

AMERICAN FLAG raising ceremonies marked the opening of the 1966 Babe Ruth baseball season last night at the local V. F. W. stadium.

Figures Show That Cost of Week's Shopping Up 7 Per Cent

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A housewives' budget brigade concluded today that government price indexes fairly reflect a hard fact of life in the 1960s: it is costing more and more to feed the family.

If you're a housewife, what's bothering you most today?

Chances are its prices in general and food prices in particular.

In fact, many housewives seem convinced that food prices have just about doubled in the past years.

Well, that hasn't quite happened -- not according to the figures of an unusual independent food price survey by The Associated Press.

The AP survey concentrated on 12 major cities where the government also publishes a price breakdown on a large list of food items. AP's budget brigade of sharp-eyed housewives went through their check in much the same manner as do the government checkers.

You'll find their report most interesting. The article shows you what has happened to food prices over the past year, where and how budgeting is easiest, what the AP housewife brigade thinks of it all, and many other intriguing market basket details.

St. Louis was one of the 12 cities where AP housewife budget brigades made shopping price surveys on March 10. Want to know where your food money goes? This shows the budget brigade's findings along with results of the government price survey made at about the same time.

In order, the figures that follow, are the government's for 1965, the government's for 1966, and the Associated Press figures for 1966:

Many housewives seem firmly convinced that food prices just about doubled in the past year. They didn't, but government figures, supported by an independent Associated Press survey in March, show that the cost of a typical week's shopping went up nearly 7 per cent.

Meats, however, have risen sharply. Based on the government's national price averages, it cost $6.22 to buy one pound each of sirloin steak, hamburger, pork chops, ham, bacon and lamb chops in mid-March, compared with $5.12 in mid-March, of 1965 -- a rise of 21.5 per cent.

By contrast, the other items on the shopping list of the AP's budget brigade rose only 1.5 per cent.

The AP's budget brigade figures, and the government's, should enable skeptical shoppers to judge for themselves.

They said food prices over-all were unquestionably high, although many a penny could be shaved off the grocery bill by determined bargain-hunting from store to store. Some made the point that few housewives can spare so much time from their other home-making duties.

If a housewife does all her shopping at one store, the researcher in St. Louis said, "It doesn't matter much which store you shop at -- they'll get all your money anyway."

"Each store's weekly bargains really were bargains," she reported. "They cut off as much as 20 or 30 cents per item. But they seem to make it up somewhere else."

The Associated Press budget brigade priced a list of 38 to 40 foot items, from potatoes to sirloin steak, in three supermarkets in each of the 12 cities on March 10.

The results were set alongside returns from U.S. Department of Labor checkers who shopped a wider range of stores in the same cities at approximately the same time. The stores in 50 smaller cities for which no price breakdown is published.

In the 12 cities where the AP paralleled the government survey, average total bills were remarkably similar and in the case of St. Louis came out at precisely the same figure--$20.43.

The government goes about its monthly price-gathering in a cooly scientific way, using 125 checkers working under field supervisors and supported by computers at home base. The AP survey was a matronly affair on a much smaller scale but following in the footsteps of the government checkers.

Food prices make up only 22.5 per cent of the government's over-all cost of living index, which during the March-to-March period rose 2.5 per cent. However, it is food prices which the housewife encounters face to face every week and is most aware of.

Both AP and government checkers reported Cleveland to be the cheapest city for the over-all food bill. Government checkers came up with a figure of $19.67 for 39 items, and the AP housewife found the same items for $18.77.

Government checkers found San Francisco to be the costliest city, with an average price of $21.27 for 39 items compared with $19.70 reported by the AP checker. Costliest city in the AP survey was Boston, with a total of $21.06 compared with the government finding of $21.10.

In between the extremes came Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Washington, D.C.

My budget is strained to the breaking point," commented the Cleveland housewife.

The housewife in Washington complained that "some basic items of diet have increased over the past year with no publicity -- bread up 4 cents, milk up 4 cents, rice up 4 cents, potatoes up 15 to 25 cents for 10 pounds."

Said the Chicagoan: "The manager of a store I checked said he had 600 'voids' in the past week. A 'void' is where a customer finds he doesn't have enough money to pay for everything in his basket."

"All prices have skyrocketed but meat is extremely high," said the Pittsburgh reporter.

The Baltimore surveyor said "an employe of one of the supermarkets included in my canvass claimed he is spending more time changing the shelf prices of goods than stocking the shelves themselves."

"The average housewife finds herself buying a lower quality item to keep her budget balanced," said the Detroiter. "I watch pennies closer than ever before."

The AP budget brigade turned up a wide spread in prices for individual items from store to store in the same city. But by the time they had priced all the items on the list, the total tended to be about the same.

In Baltimore, for example, one store had an 89-cent special on sirloin steak while a second store charged $1.19. Nevertheless the checker's total bill was $20.57 in the first store, $20.59 in the other.

Reports by both sets of checkers indicated that pork prices, which had been in orbit for months, were beginning to level out or decline, although still far higher than a year ago.

Government checkers reported an average price of $1.11.7 for pork chops in in February and 93.2 cents in March 1965, $1.09.5 in Boston compared with $1.12.1 and 85.1 cents.

AP's budget brigade found their three-store average price for pork chops to be $1.17.7 in Baltimore, $1.11.7 in Boston, $1.11.3 in Cleveland and 99 cents in Detroit.

The tendency for food prices in general to level out was reflected in April statistics announced by the government a week ago showing that over-all food costs rose only .1 of 1 per cent over the March averages.

The AP budget brigade in general agreed that there are several ways to resist advancing prices. These include buying only the items on a prepared list, placing a limit on the total to be spent, eliminating luxuries and buying less expensive grades.

The AP's Detroit checker said advances in the processing of foods often beguile the shopper into spending more than she intended.

"Before, it was canned peas, now it's frozen peas with miniature onions or in mushroom sauce," she said. "Corn once came packed in water. Now it is frozen in pure butter."

The Cleveland member of the team remarked that "so complete and elegant an array of prepared foods now is on the market that I begin to suspect the cook may be done away with."

The budget brigade said shopping in several stores saves money, but may prolong the chore of buying the groceries beyond that which a busy housewife can spare.

The Philadelphia checker said: "I find it necessary to shopping all three stores to take advantage of their loss leaders and determine which stores have the better values."

The brigade's San Francisco housewife said she was surprised to find that "a market well known for its 'low prices' charged more for meat than another market considered high-priced for meat. This latter market was considerably lower in prices and its meat was superior."

An analysis of the returns from the AP's survey showed that a housewife with unlimited time for shopping could have saved a substantial sum by ferreting out the lowest price for a given item at each of the three stores visited.

Thus the shopper in the Washington area ran up a bill averaging $20 for the 40 items priced. By switching from store to store she could have had them for $18.67.

The shopping list of the AP budget brigade included staple meats, fish and poultry, fruits, vegetables, canned goods, coffee, tea, sugar, eggs, butter, margarine, cheese, cereal and cold cuts.

The total bill by cities government figure first follows: Baltimore, $20.80 and $20.83; Boston, $32.10 and $21.06; Chicago $20.52 and $19.68; Cleveland, $19.67 and $18.77; Detroit, $19.82 and $19.53; Los Angeles, $20.38 and $19.02; New York, $20.68 and $20.10; Philadelphia, $20.42 and $19.89; San Francisco, $21.27 and $19.70; Pittsburgh, $20.48 and $21.03; St. Louis, $20.43 and $20.43 same; Washington, $20.98 and $20.

Jack Flack Reports In The St. Louis Globe Democrat

Joel Montgomery -- Is He Kidding?

It appears here that Joel A. Montgomery, the Sikeston millionaire who has been in the news of late, just may be trying to pull someone's political leg.

The story out of Memphis, Tenn., this past weekend quotes Mr. Montgomery as saying he is going to run for governor or United States senator in 1968.

There happens to be a couple of other persons who are also interested in those jobs, namely the incumbents, Governor Hearnes and Senator Long. And whether you agree with their political philosophies, both are incumbents and history says incumbents are hard to beat -- not unbeatable but certainly rough to unseat barring some sort of scandal.

Joel Montgomery is no dummy when it comes to finances, as his rise to fame and fortune in Southeast Missouri has shown.

He has also toyed with local and state-wide politics and is not in the so-called beginner's class. That's why it's hard to understand why the man made the statements he did following his trial in Memphis.

UNDER STRAIN

Undoubtedly, Mr. Montgomery has been under a terrible strain these past years. First he fought extradition after former Gov. Dalton refused to extradite him for an auto death in which he was a passenger, not the driver, of a car owned by him. He became embroiled in the 1964 Democratic primary campaign when he supported Governor Hearnes' rival, Hilary Bush, who was the loser. That he should have kept his fingers out of that one, no one knows better than Joel Montgomery.

His friends charged there were political overtones to the whole matter, which Mr. Hearnes claims is nonsense. Now Mr. Montgomery has won his case, with a jury saying "not guilty," and undoubtedly a great burden has been lifted from his shoulders. Maybe he got carried away, but then again Mr. Montgomery can be a very determined man.

RAGS TO RICHES

The rags to riches story of the boy who grew up on the wrong side of the tracks in Sikeston and is now one of its most wealthy and influential citizens is well known in southeast Missouri.

It's been a couple of months now since Joel Montgomery mentioned that he "wouldn't mind seeking a public office." Here is a man who has conquered and is looking for more fields to conquer.

I was convinced at that time that Mr. Montgomery was putting out a political feeler and two months later it looks as though he is still trying to test the climate. Contrary to reports out of Memphis following his trial which termed him "politically ambitious," Mr. Montgomery is ambitious, period.

At this time though, it appears Mr. Montgomery is still talking with tongue in cheek. If given some assurances in the right places in the state, he could definitely decide to bundle a wad of his earnings together and seek the governorship, which seems more logical than the senate seat of Edward V. Long. That's because, many of Senator Long's friends are friends of Mr. Montgomery and members of the so-called "Establishment" faction of the Democratic party.

If Mr. Montgomery is serious, he'll have to make a few trips here and to Kansas City to talk to party leaders. And he has enough experience to know that two years (1968) is a short time in politics, which means the time for action is now -- to repeat, if he's serious.

Then and only then will politicians take him as being in earnest. But if Mr. Montgomery isn't kidding, it'll be a whirlwind campaign if he runs it the way he does his business enterprises.

MODERN PROBLEMS

BERKELEY, Calif. AP - In pointing out to the city council why it needs more officers, the Berkeley police department cited such new problems as the recent thefts of two motorized skateboards.

Paschall Is President of Baptists

DETROIT - The City of Detroit has had its 15,000 Baptist visitors here for the 109th session of the Southern Baptist Convention. The city officials have gone all out to make the convention feel at home with signs and banners all over the downtown areas. The riverfront has been rebuilt with beautiful Cobo Hall and Stadium and Edsel Ford auditorium as the main focal point overlooking the parks with the Windsor, Canada, skyline across the Detroit River.

Wednesday sessions opened with the Sanford University choirs singing. Thursday night's session, Foreign Mission night, heard the Southwest Baptist College Choir of Bolivar.

Messages were brought by several Baptist leaders including Warren Hultgren of Tulsa, Okla., Douglas Hudgins of Jackson, Miss. The Rev. Frank Paschall of the First Baptist church of Nashville, Tenn., spoke. Later it was announced that he had been chosen president of the 11,000,000 members of the Southern Baptist Convention. Evangelistic singers brought messages in song.

Thursday night was Foreign Mission night and several hundred new pastors and their wives came to the stage as they've been appointed to serve on the mission field in some part of the world.

The Rev. James W. Hackney and Mrs. Hackney of Sikeston, Mo. visited with hundreds of friends from college and seminary days in New Orleans Baptist Seminary. The other messengers of Sikeston, Mo., Lenzie and Geneva Beck, Charles and Carlene Johnson, David Hackney, Carol Hackney, and John W. Davis visited with several Baptist friends. They saw and visited the former Superintendent of Missions and associate pastor at the First Baptist Church of Sikeston, Paul Higgins and his group of seven messengers from the Sagamon Association of Decatur, Ill.

The convention adopted a budget of 26 million dollars.

CAUGHT BY FILM

PAWTUCKET, R.I. AP - Rene Gagnon of Seekonk, Mass., saw two young fellows jump into his car parked near the plant where he works. Grabbing his movie camera, he took pictures of the pair as they drove away with the stolen car. Police saw the pictures and quickly arrested two teenagers.

"Tadpoles and snails and puppy dog tails, thats what little boys are made of", and I've discovered, sometimes to my utter horror, quite a number of other things besides. I'm positive about that tadpole bit, having recently knocked over an innocent looking jar of dirty water, only to find myself and everything about and around me covered with little black squirmy, nasty, dirty, Ugh-Ugh-Ugh, frogs to be. Today I walked into the boy's bathroom and sitting in various points of prominence were three more jars---one filled with sweat bees, another with a lone bumble bee, and heaven knows what that was that was wiggling around in the other container!!! Needless to say, I decided I'd clean in there another day and I beat a hasty retreat. Girls collect dolls --- but boys? Only the other day I just knew my washing machine had blown a gasket from the amount of banging and clanging that was going on, but no, I'd just missed cleaning out one of Lee's pockets (a job I don't relish, as I am very hesitant about sticking my hand in where I can't see), and bouncing around in the washer was one large rock, several assorted soda bottle caps, fifteen or twenty saturated and in minute pieces (Lee just now walked in and asked me for another jar, I don't think I can stand it!) bubble gum wrappers and a coiled piece of wire. I just don't stand a chance! Despite my protests, he just found a jar, wonder what addition to the family we're going to have now, with my luck all these bugs are probably male too.

Well, that does it, no new bugs, just one less jar, broken all over the patio. I don't see how mothers ever get anything accomplished with all the million and one little crisis that crop up each and every day, along with the washing, cleaning, ironing, cooking, changing beds, changing clothes (at least four or five times a day, and I don't mean mine), etc., and then Charles has the gall to come in at dinnertime and say, "What have you been doing all day, just sitting around?" By then, I'm usually prone on the sofa having one of those migranes the t.v. commericals tell you about, and if I weren't so weak, I'd belt him, as it it, I just close my eyes and think bad thoughts, and even that requires more energy than I've got left.

Well, I've just cleaned up the slivers from the jar and whopped two bottoms, so in the fifteen minutes leeway, before another mishap, that I usually get after a good whop, I guess I'll stir up a little something for Cherie's Boys. No! I'm not either, they don't deserve it today, instead I'm going to stir up a little something for Cherie. This is the best Daiquiri in the world, and if there are any broken jars around your house, have one before you start sweeping up the pieces -- its great for the morale.

1/2 ounce of lime juice
1 ounce orange juice (that's the secret)
1 1/2 ounce light rum
1 tsp. of fine sugar or 1/2 ounce sugar syrup.

Mix in blendor with cup of crushed ice for 10 seconds; or shake with ice and serve on the rocks. Wheeee--Bring on the bugs -- I'm ready!!

PAINTING DELAYED

SOUTH PASADENA, Calif. - Eight housepainters were swishing paint on the side wall of a house here when a driverless pickup truck crashed down a hill, hit the wall and knocked it down. None of the painters was hurt, but the wall damage was extensive.

Thomas Havanis, owner of the truck, said he saw it begin to roll but couldn't get to it in time to stop it.

EASY SOLUTION

NORTH HALEDON, N.Y. - After driving for more than 50 years, Charles Wildeboer, 81, pressed his lips to his driver's license, kissed it goodby and placed it on the judge's bench. He had been arrested and was in court on a careless driving charge. He told the judge: "I think it is time to give up the license."

Lucy tells off Charlie Brown during heat of a tense contest.

Charlie Brown Does It Again For TV--Loses

Charlie Brown preserves his perfect pitching record with 999 straight losses and faces the greatest crisis in his ill-fated baseball career in "Charlie Brown's All-Stars," color cartoon Special to be broadcast WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8 (8:30-9:00 p.m., EDT), on the CBS Television Network.

It is the second in a series of Charlie Brown Specials featuring the popular "Peanuts" comic strip characters and written by their creator, Charles Schulz. The first program, "A Charlie Brown Christmas," received a Peabody Award and was twice honored by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

When Charlie winds up his 999th game in a blaze of failure, the rest of the "Peanuts" gang, including Lucy, Linus, Schroeder, Frieda and Snoopy the interpid shortstop, are thoroughly disgusted and decide to quit baseball forever. They take off on a variety of springtime pursuits -- Snoopy goes surfing, Lucy and the girls take up skate-boarding -- leaving poor old Charlie Brown out in left field, alone and despondent.

Suddenly a local merchant offers to outfit the group in official uniforms and Charlie sees his chance to save the team. He persuades the All-Stars to return to his diamond for one more game. It is Charlie's finest hour -- almost.

Master jazz musician Vince Guaraldi, Grammy Award winner who composed and performed the original score for "A Charlie Brown Christmas," has created the musical backgrounds for "Charlie Brown's All-Stars."

Peter Robbins is heard as the voice of Charlie Brown. Sally Dryer is Lucy Van Pelt and Christopher Shea speaks the words of Linus. Chris Doran is Schroeder, Kathy Steinberg is Sally and Anne Altieri is the voice of Frieda.

It is a Lee-Mendelson-Bill Melendez Production, in cooperation with United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Report From Washington

Paul C. Jones

By a vote of 303-93, the House of Representatives has passed and sent to the Senate H. R. 13712, to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act, more commonly known as the Wage-Hour law, after three days of consideration.

Since this Representative was one of the 93 who voted against this bill, I would like to take this opportunity of pointing out certain provisions of the bill which caused me to vote as I did. First, let me say I was not so much opposed to the increase in the minimum wage, as I was apprehensive of the extended coverage, which in my opinion goes too far, particularly as it relates to coverage and overtime provisions for so-called agricultural workers, though without question, the percentage increases in the minimum wage can have none other than an inflationary effect which in many instances will wipe out the increase in hourly rates. For those already covered, the minimum wage on February 1, 1967, will go from $1.25 an hour to $1.40 an hour, and then two years later will advance to $1.60 an hour. I stated on the floor that a more reasonable and logical increase would have been $1.35 an hour on February 1, 1967; $1.45 an hour a year later and a $1.60 two years later. This would have meant an 8 per cent increase the first step (more than twice that provided by the President's suggested guide lines), rather than the 15 per cent provided in the bill.

Tha radical increase in coverage by lowering the volume of business test from one million dollars a year to $250,000 a year, will have the effect of placing under coverage thousands of employees of small business, including both retail, service and manufacturing establishments, many of which in my opinion will be forced out of business, particularly those small independent retail establishments, which in the past have received preferential treatment over the chain store operation. Many of these businesses have been hiring many inexperienced and sub-standard employees, who in all likelihood will also be forced out of employment, since the employer when he has to pay the minimum of $1.40 and $1.60 an hour will confine his employment to the more efficient and more productive employees.

The same situation prevails in the field of agriculture and agricultural processing, where many of those who have been employed in the past will find it more difficult, if not impossible to find employment at the higher rates. Particularly will this be true among the unskilled and the handicapped workers, who I believe will eventually land on the relief rolls. When legislation is written by individuals who are not familiar with farm operations, and the handling and processing of agricultural commodities, they cannot have an understanding of some of the problems which will arise. Take, for instance, the case of the sharecropper, who has contract to share 50-50 with the landowner, who shares in the expense of producing a crop by furnishing seed, fertilizer, etc., and they both share in the crop on an equal basis in "boom" and "bust" times. There was no assurance given, that in the case where the landowner exercises any control in what is planted, methods of cultivation, and times of harvest and marketing, that at the end of the year when production yields are down; where weather or other hazards have reduced the income to a point where the sharecropper can show that his portion of the crop does not equal an amount, derived from computing the hours he contributed by the minimum wage, then he could conceivably have a claim against his Landlord to make up the difference between the value of his half of the crop, and the minimum wage he would be entitled to based upon the hours he said he worked. Certainly, it is ridiculous to imagine a landowner being able to keep track of the hours contributed by the sharecropper. It is hoped, of course, that situations such as this can be clarified when the bill is considered in the Senate.

Farmers who would be exempt from the law are those who do not in any three-months period use more than 500 man-hours of hired help, and it will be a very small farmer, who during a harvest period can hold his hired help to less than 500 man-hours during any three month period. Most of us can imagine the helpless feeling which will be experienced by many of these small farmers when they are called upon to keep the records which will be required by the Department of Labor which has never been known to be very sympathetic with the farm problem.

An effort was made to eliminate some of these problems by giving more realistic consideration to the farm segment which in my opinion is going to be drastically affected by this bill, but with so few representatives from agricultural areas, and with the urban members having no conception of the problems which will be encountered, we were outvoted in every attempt. All I can say is, that unless the Senate recognizes some of the problems which were not apparent to the majority of the members of the House, we are in for a more accelerated inflation, and much confusion, particularly among those farmers and processors, small business operators who will be covered for the first time, and by operators of hospitals, nursing homes and similar institutions whose rates must of necessity be increased materially.

Washington Report

Sen. Stuart Symington

A SUBCONTRACT FOR APPROXIMATELY $1 MILLION with a potential of another $2 million has been awarded to the North American Aviation Rockeydyne - Neosho Plant by the AVCO Corporation of Stratford, Connecticut. The contract is for production of engine parts for the type of turbine engine used in the Chinook Army Transport helicopter which is employed in limited warfare such as military operations in Viet Nam.

When I was in Viet Nam the first of this year, helicopters were everywhere in evidence. Within the 1st Cavalry, for example, there were 1,700 helicopter takeoffs and landings per day. Accident rate was very low and compared favorably to that experienced in training at Fort Benning. The Chinook was being used not only in lifting men and supplies, but also 105 mm. artillery.

The helicopter is truly a workhorse for the modern army. Missouri can be proud that some of the production work will be done at the Neosho plant.

This past week I joined more than 20 other Senators in cosponsoring a measure introduced by Senators Ross Bass and John Sherman Cooper to provide additional sources of capital funds to supplement and eventually replace the present REA government loan programs.

The bill would create a Federal Electric Bank and a Federal Telephone Bank, which would be similar to the credit institutions of the Farm Credit Administration.

Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor has increased the licensed export quotas for whole cattle hides from 9,920,000 to 11,220,000 and for other cattle hides from 810,000 to 1,000,000 prices. Increases in quotas were also authorized for other skins and leathers. Country quotas for cattle hides were abolished.

The Secretary said the recent hearings showed a substantial shortage of cattle hides and an abnormal foreign demand for them. Therefore he found the export controls should be continued to prevent an inflationary impact on the domestic economy through increased cost of leather shoes.

On May 24, the Senate authorized the ninth fiscal budget for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The authorization of $5,008,000,000 will further our efforts to land astronauts on the moon and continue our scientific exploration of the solar system to expand our knowledge and activities in space.

I have been appointed to serve as one of the five Senate conferees to work out differences between the Senate and House versions.

Missouri Press Report

by Senator Edward V. Long

Missouri has won approval for $9,342,000 in community water and waste disposal system loans and grants during the 1966 fiscal year, the Farmers Home Administration has just announced.

Additional grants and loans totaling several million dollars have received tentative approval.

Across the nation, in 1961, the Farmers Home Administration received only 110 applications for water system loans.

By contrast, in the first six months of fiscal year 1966, the agency received 1,377 applications for water and sewer loans as compared to the 1,019 applications for the entire fiscal year 1965.

Under the program, rural communities up to 5,500 population are eligible for loans and grants. Loans can be made up to $4 million and grants can be made up to 50 percent of cost of construction.

It is estimated that there are some 30,000 rural communities that are still without central water supplies or adequate waste disposal systems.

The Senate has passed a $5 billion space authorization bill. Included in the bill is $2 billion for project Apollo -- the U.S. effort to land a man on the moon by 1970.

Visited the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, Texas, recently, where I saw the mission control center used for the current series of Gemini flights. Met with Astronaut Gordon Cooper who flew 14 days in Gemini V.

The Special Subcommittee on Aging has just held hearings on a bill to create a Talented American Senior Corps. Under this bill, elderly Americans would be given an opportunity to serve their communities, aid in the guidance and care of children, assist in schools and on playgrounds, work in hospitals and help in home repairs.

The bill recognizes that many of our senior citizens are willing and able to serve usefully and productively many years after retirement.

Many of the services would be directed at relieving the desperate conditions of the elderly poor.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has just announced regional hearings to consider the level for Class I fluid milk prices for the period July - December, 1966. The Missouri meeting will be held in St. Louis and will cover the St. Louis, St. Louis Suburban, St. Joseph, Greater Kansas City, and Neosho Valley milk marketing orders. Date of the meeting is June 7.

From left, Suzanne Ivey, Mary Beth Meyer, Michelle Sargent and Leslie Schuhart are practicing taking bows for the applause they surely will receive tonight at the junior high school auditorium. Essex-Richland School Plans Summer Programs

ESSEX -- The Richland School District R-1 of Essex Gray Ridge, in cooperation with Title I of the National Elementary and Secondary Education Act, will offer to the pupils of the district a broad basic skills improvement program during an eight-week summer session, beginning June 6.

Any pupil in the school district, grades 1-12 inclusive, whose score on a nationally rated standardized test indicated a need for improvement in any of the basic skills of reading, language arts, mathemathcs, science, and social studies - history, to increase proficiency in any area to that accepted as normal for the pupils age and grade or proficiency in subject area for a high school pupil, is eligible to attend.

Letters have gone out to all parents who have children whom school officials, including principals, counselors, and teachers feel would benefit from attendance in this program.

There will be some recreational and cultural offerings to supplement the basic skills program to insure an enjoyable and profitable program for all pupils attending.

Busses will transport all pupils to and from school. Routes are being worked out for present enrollments and will be altered to pick up all pupils as the need arises.

Busses will begin to pick up pupils at 7 a.m. Monday, June 6. Busses will be on different routes and time schedules from the regular term. After enrollment is complete, busses will be able to set a definite schedule and route.

Classes will meet from 8 a.m. to noon. Lunch will be served at noon and school will be dismissed at the close of the lunch period, 12:30.

Lunch, school supplies, books and all costs will be furnished pupils. There will be no cost to any pupil to attend the session.

Classes will be small to permit individual instruction. Additional teaching materials and equipment is being furnished to improve each pupil chance for improvement at an accelerated rate.

This is a program designed to help pupils to become better prepared academically, physically and socially. A person may enroll by calling AV3-5318 for grades 1-8 and AV3-5332 for Grades 1-12.

The summer HEAD START program for Richland School District R-1 has been tentatively approved, and will begin on Monday, June 6, for an eight-week session.

Children who will be eligible to attend next year will be eligible to attend Head Start if they meet federal regulations on income.

Regulatons state that 90 per cent of the children in Head Start must come from families with incomes below $2500. for a non - farm family and $1,500. for a farm family. There are other factors which permit acceptance of certain children so anyone interested in their child attending Head Start should bring the child to school on Monday, June 6, or call school official for further details to determine the eligibility of the child to attend.

A child must be six years old on or before September 30 to attend school at Richland next year, the same as previously, to Head Start this summer.

Children who have not already enrolled and presented their birth certificates for record purposes should be prepared to do so on the first day of HEAD START on June 6.

There are varying age limits being used by different schools for HEAD START just as the starting date for entering regular school varies.

The above dates are being used by the Richland District because a kindergarten program will be offered this fall to all children of the district who will be starting to school in 1967-68 and it would only result in duplication to permit younger children to attend this summer.

Busses will start to pick up children at 7 a.m. Classes will operate from 8 a.m. to noon. A mid - morning snack and lunch will be served to all children at no cost to the child.

For additional information or to register your child, call AV3-5332 or come by the Richland High School general office.

It's making a man of him

Only about one boy in ten gets this opportunity. If you think your son might profit by newspaper route experience, why not suggest that he come in and talk to us?

Many a dad points with pride to the benefits his son is deriving from newspaper route management.

Under the guidance of men who are interested in and trained to work with boys, it channels youthful energies into an "on-the-job" training program that teaches them:

- how to make money (and an appreciation of what to do with it);
- how to get along with people;
- the importance of service and punctuality;
- the thrill of making a sale.

It's the greatest part-time job available for youngsters today according to Educators, Civic Leaders and Juvenile Authorities.

GETS LEG ON LIFE

CLEVELAND, Tenn. AP - A prized red and brown hen belonging to Ben Keller recently lost a leg in an accident. Not wanting to kill the bird and lose a good egg layer, Keller made a peg leg of plastic and leather. The hen now struts about majestically and has even learned to scratch with the new leg.

BURGLARY INSIDE JAIL

Hope to Make Soft Landing on Moon Thursday

By RALPH DIGHTON
Associated Press
Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. AP -- Surveyor 1, streaking toward a landing on the moon Thursday morning, carries not only a camera but this nation's hopes of making the first touchdown gentle enough for men to survive.

Surveyor is due to settle on a broad equatorial plain at 2:17 a.m. EDT and begin radioing pictures which will help scientists pick the safest areas for Apollo astronaut landings later in this decade.

If everything works, Surveyor will fire retro-rockets to break its approach speed from 6,100 miles an hour to 3 1/2 miles an hour, then drop gently the final 14 feet with less impact than a parachutist feels on earth.

The Soviet Union's ball-shaped Luna 9, which radioed the first pictures from the lunar surface last Feb. 3, apparently was ejected from a carrier vehicle at a height of several hundred feet.

"Information and pictures recently released in Moscow indicate the fall probably would have been fatal to an unprotected human," said Dr. Thomas Vrebalovich, of Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which is guiding Surveyor on its quarter-million-mile flight.

Dr. Vrebalovich, a Surveyor project scientist, said in an interview that the Luna 9 technique was similar to one abandoned by the U.S. space agency years ago.

He referred to the early Ranger shots, originally planned to drop instruments imbedded in balsa wood balls just before they crashed into the moon. The balls later were left off the spacecraft to allow more room for television cameras which radioed back history's first closeups of the moon as they plunged to destruction.

The Soviets have never disclosed just how Luna 9 was landed, but Dr. Vrebalovich said it was obvious the 200-pound ball carried no retro-rockets.

Monitoring of Soviet signals indicated that the carrier vehicle fired a retro-rocket about 40 miles above the lunar surface and shortly afterwards ejected the crushproof ball, which popped open on impact and started a camera, he said.

THE PRAYER
For Today From The Upper Room

The comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. (John 14:26)

PRAYER: Dear heavenly Father, we are grateful that Thou dost still promise the near presence of the Holy Spirit to all who repent and believe on Thy Son Jesus Christ. Give us the wisdom to keep our bodies as living temples, fit for his indwelling. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

It was learned later that someone had told the Japanese that the term meant okay.

Today In U. S. History

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1813, Captain James Lawrence, mortally wounded, cried, "Don't give up the ship!" This came as he was taken from the deck of his American frigate, Chesapeake.

On this date

In 1792, statehood was granted to Kentucky.

In 1796, Tennessee was admitted to the Union.

In 1942, a giant armada of British Royal Air Force planes from Britain bombed the German industrial city of Essen.

In 1945, U.S. planes dropped about 3,000 tons of fire bombs on the Japanese stronghold of Osaka in a daylight raid.

In 1946, the Navy revealed the development of the so-called doodle-bug a device carried by planes to detect the presence of submarines under water.

Ten years ago -- It was announced that Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov had resigned. Molotov was an old Bolshevik, a holdover from the Stalin regime. Western observers were not surprised at his resignation.

Five years ago -- The ground caved in under a Parisian suburb, killing at least 20 persons and destroying at least 50 homes and apartment buildings.

One year ago -- President Johnson at a news conference defended the U.S. action of sending troops to Santo Domingo at the outbreak of a disorderly crisis in the Dominican Republic.

Convict Releases Hostages

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A man believed to be an escaped convict held a couple hostage Tuesday night for several hours in their farm home near Marion.

The Highway Patrol said Mr. and Mrs. Richard Snelling were not harmed and that their description of the man corresponded to that of Rahmond Paul Patrick, 41, a life termer from Monroe County, who escaped from the Church prison farm northwest of Jefferson City Sunday.

Marion is a short distance up the Missouri river from the prison farm on Rt. 41.

When the man left about 10:30 p. m. he took the Snelling car, a 1953 turquoise Ford, a shotgun and a rifle. He had been in the house since about 2 p. m. He held Mrs. Snelling captive until her husband came home from work about 5 o'clock.

He was identified as George Veach, 39, serving a seven-year term from Audrain Count on a bad check conviction.

BIBLE WEEK POST—Don L. Jordan, board chairman of Johnson Carper Furniture Co. of Roanoke, Va., is chairman of the Special Gifts Committee for this fall's 26th annual National Bible Week. The all-faiths observance is the week of Oct. 17-23.

"never did water stand on this cornfield."

Sam is kept busy almost every minute of the day, taking long distance calls from his produce haulers in almost every state of the union. The report from his long distance haulers report good crops on the east and west coast lines, but they are running low, and leaves the middlewest a chance to come back with a late fall crop.

Tanksley will replant a new potato crop in July, for fall harvest, thereby making up for most of his early season losses.

He will also plant about 60 acres of lettuce, sometime in late July and early August, also for a fall shipment.

What he will do to recoup his watermelon crop remains to be seen, but if there is a chance for a later crop, he'll do something about it.

He is a man of perfection when it comes to raising produce. Over the years he has trucked thousands of tons of garden produce over the nation, and has learned much about the crop, so with any future degree of success he will come out on top in supplying produce by hauling produce the year around.

An indication of shroud separation came when a light blinked on in ground tracking equipment at the time the Atlas engines cut off. However, the light went out shortly afterward. If there had been separation, it should have remained on.

But mission director William C. Schneider said the blink of the signal light indicated a "high probability" of separation.

After an on-time launch at 11 a.m. EDT, the satellite sailed into an almost perfect circular orbit ranging from 184.9 to gial had been 185 miles.

Road Improvement Parley Scheduled Here June 11

The Missouri State Highway Commission will hold a public hearing at Sikeston June 11 to here views from residents of Southeast Missouri on the state road system.

A. C. "Dub" Riley of New Madrid, who represents southeast Missouri on the six-member state road board, said the hearing would be held at Sikeston high school at 10 a.m.

The Highway Commission last year announced its intention to hold public hearings throughout the state to provide citizens with an opportunity to voice their observations, criticisms and views about the state's road systems.

The Sikeston hearing will be the third scheduled by the commission since it began the project. Any southeast Missourian who wants to make observations or suggestions to the commission is invited to attend the public hearing, Mr. Riley noted.

Special notices are being mailed this week to southeast Missouri county court judges, road district commissioners and others connected with road building projects.

Matthews Points Out Improved Crime Record

Scott county assistant prosecuting attorney Charles Matthews, member of a prominent family of Sikeston, explained problems of controlling crime in Scott County last night at the Kiwanis Meeting at the Holiday Inn.

Mr. Matthews brought out points of law that now apply to prosecution of persons who have committed a misdemeanor and those who have committed a felony.

The new Public Aid Office now proposed by Federal Law is detrimental to the judical system. It appears to be attractive in that it offers free legal aid to the poor, however, the ramifications are such that it would undermine those services presently being offered and performed by the bar association, Mr. Matthews said.

He was most complimentary toward the local Sikeston police department and the county sheriff's office. They are doing a good job despite the fact that the Scott County Sheriff's Office is operating now with the same number of men they had 10 years ago and the Sikeston police department with 16 men, is 6 men short of the national average for a town of this size.

Crime statistics quoted gave our county a good record primarily because of the money spent in Scott county which showed a lower record than the national average on juvenile delinquency.

Jim Stephenson served as president of the club in the absence of Pres. Lee Shell who was attending a banking school in Baton Rouge, La.

Guests of the club were Lieut. Gov. Ed Cannon of Dist. no. 12 and the three men accompanying him, from Poplar Bluff were, Buell Thompson, Harvey Anglin and Charles Cray.

Pat Lea's visitor was Geo. Dawling, architect from Little Rock, Ark.

Craig In Kansas City

Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig is in Kansas City today to attend the Judicial Conference of Missouri that is to begin tomorrow for the 127 trial and appellate court judges of the state. The conference is to end Saturday.

Jones Lashes Out At Minimum Wage Bill

WASHINGTON AP -- Rep. Paul G. Jones, D-Mo., took a swipe at a bill to raise the minimum wage, saying the extended coverage goes too far, particularly as it relates to coverage and overtime provisions for "so - called agricultural workers."

Jones told constituents in a newsletter he was not so much opposed to the increase in the prehensive of the extended coverage.

The House passed the bill last week, 303-93, and sent it to the Senate. The bill would raise the minimum wage from $1.25 an hour to $1.40 Feb. 1 and to $1.60 on Feb. 1, 1969.

Jones voted against the bill. "The radical increase in coverage by lowering the volume of business test from $1,000,000 to $250,000 a year, will have the effect of placing under coverage thousands of employes of small business, including both retail, service and manufacturing establishments," he said.

Many of these businesses, he said, have been hiring a number of "inexperienced and sub-standard" employes who likely would be forced out of work since the employer, who would have to pay increased minimum wages, would confine employment to more efficient workers.

The same situation prevails in agriculture and agriculture processing where many of those who have been employed in the past will find it difficult, if not impossible, to find employment at the higher rates, Jones said.

WHY IS A SHORT BLANKET like Social Security-?

. . . Because it provides a limited amount of comfort, but seldom covers your needs completely.

That's why many folks are the proud owners of Jefferson Standard's Retirement Income Plan, which provides extra income to take care of the many needs, comforts and conveniences that Social Security seldom covers. Let me give you the details.

Charges Police Refused to Make Call, Left Car In Ditch; Auto Firm Flooded

DEXTER -- An automobile went off the road, into a ditch and stopped the flow of water under a bridge almost directly in front of the Estes Walker-Knight motor firm here May 23, and the resulting flood waters caused several hundred dollars worth of damage to the motor company, it was learned.

The car remained in the ditch, "plugging the hole" underneath the bridge throughout the remainder of the night, despite the fact that local police visited the scene briefly. They made no effort to call a local wrecker or to reach one of the owners of the Estes-Walker-Knight firm, H. L. (Bake) Estes said.

"If the police had just taken the trouble to call me, or to call any other wrecker, we could have averted all this damage", Estes said.

The car was being driven by a man identified as Freddie Truesdale, who was reportedly living a Bloomfield. He was not injured, but the 1963 Ford convertible which he was driving was badly damaged, mainly by water since the car stayed in the flooded ditch during the remainder of the night, Estes said.

Since the ditch was the "plugged" by the car, the water which fell during the rainstorm backed up onto the Estes-Walker-Knight lot, and into the building. The flood waters did several hundred dollars worth of damage to the body shop, alone, Estes said.

"If they (the police) had just taken a minute to call me, or one of my men, we would have been happy to have removed the car", Estes said. "Or", he added, "so would any other person with a wrecker in town".

No report of the accident or the resulting damage to the auto firm had been made by the local police when a Statesman staff member visited the police headquarters later last week.

Convention Ends Friday

DETROIT -- The Southern Baptist Convention ended here Friday. The Foreign Mission Session was Thursday night. The theme was "God's Word for a New Age." The missionaries present were called to the huge stage in Cobo Hall where each gave his name and where they will serve. There were two or three couples from Missouri.

Leaders in the field of religious music brought gospel messages in song to the packed Cobo Hall.

The Thursday night's sermon was delivered by the Rev. Baker J. Cauthern, executive secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of Richmond, Va. He stated that each messenger (delegate) there should ask himself, "Lord, what do you want me to do?" He gave his his own experience and history of his foreign service of how the Lord used him after letting him know what he wanted him to do. He was on the foreign field from 1938-1941. He said "I'm still a missionary and always will be even thought I serve now in the offices at Richmond, Va."

The Rev. James W. Hackney, pastor of the First Baptist church of Sikeston, Mo., said "My group had received many, many blessings from this great convention and I'm so proud that so many got to attend from First Church. I just wish it were possible for all my congregation to attend one of these Southern Baptist National Conentions."

The group of delegates from Sikeston returned home Saturday.

Next year's convention will be in Miami Beach, Fla. and in 1971 it will be held in St. Louis.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Are maple trees cultivated to produce superior maple sugar?

A—No. This is one product which nature has produced better than man. Trees must be grown from seed to produce good maple sugar; second-growth wood has poor sugar sap.

Q—Where did the name avocado originate?

A—The tree is the oldest fruit crop in Florida, where it was introduced by the Spanish. Its Spanish name, "aguacate," sounds like "avocado" when it is spoken fast.

Q—What name is applied to the female fox?

A—Vixen.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am past 30, so please don't call me Toots or Lamb-Chop or any of your other cute names.

For the past three years I have been employed as a bookkeeper by a very good firm. I am in charge of the cash box, out of which I pay C. O. D.'s and other incidentals. The box contains $350 at all times-- or vouchers which account for the missing money. I am responsible for that amount.

Almost every Friday I take $35 or $50 from the cash box to play bingo or bet on a ball game or a golf match or some other sporting event. I'm not only an educated bettor, but a lucky one. I usually win. When I lose I repay the cash box from my savings account.

Yesterday the boss called me in and told me he had heard I borrowed money from the cash box to place bets. At that very moment the cash box balanced perfectly because just that morning I had repaid the $50 I had borrowed on Friday.

I'm furious that he would criticize me since I am responsible for the cash box and if I want to borrow from it, it's my business, isn't it? Yes or no?--LOUISVILLE

Dear L.: You have no right to borrow money from that box for a weekend, a day or even a minute. Why in the world don't you have a checking account, woman?

Almost every embezzler started out by "borrowing" from the company, just as you have been doing. Anyone who uses company money for his own purposes is inviting disaster and disaster invariably accepts the invitation.

Dear Ann Landers: Last Friday night we had a couple here for dinner. I had never met either the man or his wife before. He was transferred here and works for the same firm that employs my husband.

They arrived about 7:00 P.M. and we had cocktails. They were congenial and I liked them both. After dinner my husband took out his guitar. I played the piano and we all sang. Around 11:00 my husband suggested that we show the movies of our trip to Hawaii. They were thrilled at the idea.

When the movies were finished it was midnight. My husband suggested that they sleep at our house rather than drive to the suburbs -- about 45 minutes away. When they accepted I almost fainted.

I had a change the sheets and iron a pair of pajamas for the man to sleep in -- all this after midnight. I told my husband after they left the next noon that he had a nerve asking guests to stay overnight without first checking with me. He says I have no spirit of adventure and that the unexpected things in life are the most fun.

Am I a dead - head as he insists? -- VERONICA

Dear V.: I can think of things that are a lot more fun than changing sheets at midnight and ironing pajamas for people you met just that evening.

Your husband should not have asked them to stay and they should not have accepted. You say nothing of a hurricane, earthquake, blizzard, illness or too much liquor. You described them as "easy to know." If you ask me they are TOO easy to know. Cool it.

The Old Timer

by ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK AP - "Your gums should be as tough as a callus on your hand," said the dentist. "But most people don't know that yet."

Partly for that reason, Americans are victimized by a galloping, costly epidemic of gum disease, made all the more woeful because it can be stopped, and it can be prevented.

Second only perhaps to the commond cold in the millions of victims claimed, this saboteur is periodonta disease, meaning an affliction of the gums and bone and other tissues around the teeth.

In its major form, periodontal disease begins as gingivitis-inflammation of the gums--- but then can progress to destructive periodonitis, sometimes called pyorrhea.

A red-streaked toothbrush may be one early sign of gingivitis. Irritated gums become swollen and red, and retreat a bit from the teeth. Gums bleed easily. But they usually do not hurt, so it's easy to ignore this beginning of an insidious process.

As the disease progresses, little open pockets form between gums and teeth. They fill with food particles, with calculus or "tartar," and with germs. Inflammation spreads, reaching down to the roots of teeth. Gums recede. Tiny fibers of tissue anchoring the teeth break down, and bony tissue clamping the roots of teeth dissolves. Teeth loosen, and periodontitis is taking its full toll.

But the dentist can intervene before this all happens, and can act sooner if people are aware of danger signals of what is happening.

Teeth that fail to meet evenly when food is chewed set up uneven pressures and shocks adding to the injurious process.

In early stages, removal of the calculus and treatment of the "bite" can halt the process. With more advanced disease, the dentist must remove the pockets of infection. He may have to recontour the gumline surgically, re-forming it to fit the teeth more snugly. He may have to operate on bone tissue itself, correcting pockets stretching into the bony area, correcting bone deformities to re-establish healthy conditions between gums, teeth and supporting structures.

Then, as every person who has undergone corrective steps knows so well -- prevention lies mainly with the individual, through good habits of oral hygiene.

This means careful attention to brushing the teeth -- and brushing the gums as well-preferably after each meal. It means special care to remove food debris, and the natural or unnatural architecture of teeth and gums may call for extra steps with dental floss or special toothpicks and rinsing, according to a dentist's advice. It calls for massing or exercising the gums to keep them strong, tough and healthy, and regular consultations with the dentist for early removal hazards.

Small Businessman Of The Year

JEFFERSON CITY AP - Joe H. Lambert of Chillicothe, who has a knack for making businesses prosper, was named Small Businessman of the Year in Missouri.

Presentation of the award was scheduled in the offices of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes. In prepared remarks, the governor said, "This award is presented for best exemplifying the imagination initiative, independence and integrity characteristic of America's millions of small businessmen."

May 22 to 28 is National Small Business Week. Candidates for state and national small business honors were selected by field offices of the Small Business Administration.

Lambert was born in Benton, in southeast Missouri. At 19 he became half owner of the Missouri Distributing Co. and sold sundries and dry goods from the back seat of an automobile. Fourteen years later the firm was using 44 trucks to deliver goods in 11 states.

In 1942, he became part owner of retail drug stores in Trenton, Brookfield, Kirksville and Chillicothe. He and his brother formed the Lambert Manufacturing Co. in 1945, making gloves and caps in four factories.

PICKLES A GO-GO

Pickles are like people on the go — you find them in the most unexpected places. And, like your favorite people — wherever you find them, they fit in and add to the pleasure of the occasion.

Take this new way to make sweet and sour spareribs. You wouldn't expect to find sweet mixed pickles in the recipe, but there they are, adding their own special flavor to some of the best spareribs you've ever tasted.

The ribs are as tender as a dream after baking an hour under a foil crimping and another half to three-quarters of an hour brushed with a sweet-sour sauce.

The sauce is a pleasing combination of the syrup from a jar of sweet mixed pickles and a can of pineapple chunks mixed with sugar and preserved ginger. Brush the spareribs with the sauce as they bake, then add the pickles, pineapple chunks, and a thinly sliced tomato to the sauce. Pour the whole concoction over the ribs at serving time to make as attractive a dish as you've ever set before your family on the go.

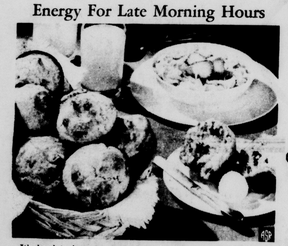
SWEET-SOUR SPARERIBS

4 pounds spareribs
1 teaspoon salt
1 jar (12 ounce) sweet mixed pickles
1 can (13½ ounce) pineapple chunks
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons chopped preserved ginger
1 medium tomato, cut into thin wedges

Cut spareribs into 3- to 4-rib portions. Arrange ribs in shallow roasting pan. Cover with foil, crimping it securely to edges of pan. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 1 hour. Uncover; drain off drippings. Sprinkle with salt. While ribs are baking, prepare sauce. Drain pickles and pineapple chunks; save syrups. Combine syrups, sugar, cornstarch, and ginger; blend. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick and clear. Brush ribs with sauce. Return to oven and cook until ribs are tender, 30 to 45 minutes. Brush with sauce several times using ½ of the sauce. Add pickles and pineapple chunks to remaining sauce; heat. Just before serving, fold in tomato pieces and heat. Serve over ribs. Garnish with whole pineapple slices, if desired. Yield: 6 servings.

SWEET-SOUR SPARERIBS. Bits of mixed pickles and pineapple add glamour as well as a piquant flavor to these Sweet-Sour Spareribs. The recipe combines good eating with good nutrition for families on the go.

Energy For Late Morning Hours



It's hard to improve on a warm breakfast muffin filled with dates and nuts. This mealtime treat tastes even better, though, when uncooked hot whole wheat cereal is used in its preparation. The cereal contributes good grain flavor and texture. Bake these muffins a day ahead. They will then need only be warmed before serving with a quick basic breakfast of fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter. It is a wise morning choice. Scientific research, known as the Iowa Breakfast Studies, has demonstrated that a basic cereal and milk breakfast supplying ¼ of the day's calories and protein is superior in maintaining mental and physical efficiency, in the late morning hours, when compared to larger or smaller morning meals.

Date 'N Nut Cereal Muffins

1½ cups sifted flour
½ cup sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup hot whole wheat cereal, uncooked
½ cup chopped nuts
½ cup finely chopped dates
2 eggs, slightly beaten
¼ cup milk
¼ cup melted shortening or cooking oil

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder, and salt. Stir in cereal, nuts, and dates. Add eggs, milk, and shortening or oil; stir just until dry ingredients are moistened. Fill greased (2½ x 1¼ inch) muffin pans about ⅔ full. Bake in hot oven (425°F) until done and browned, 18 to 20 minutes. Yield: About 12 muffins.

Proof Of The Pudding Is Brownie Dessert

Proof of the pudding is in the eating: and Brownie Dessert lives up proudly to the old saying. Prepare this elegant but simple dessert quickly with the aid of semi-sweet chocolate-morsels and condensed milk. It's so easy to make — and bake into a puffy chocolate dessert. For a final touch of luscious simplicity, crown each warm serving with a scoop of ice cream.

Brownie Pudding

1 6-ounce package (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate morsels
2 eggs
½ cup sweetened condensed milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Melt semi-sweet chocolate morsels over hot (not boiling) water. Let cool 5 minutes. Beat together eggs, condensed milk and vanilla. Combine flour, baking powder and salt; stir into egg mixture. Add melted semi-sweet chocolate morsels; mix well. Turn into a buttered 9-inch pie plate. Bake in a 325°F. oven 30 to 35 minutes. Serve warm or cool with whipped cream or ice cream. YIELD: 6 servings.

A Cool Party With Coffee Punch

Southern hostesses are known for their gracious hospitality — and with good reason. The spirit of 'open house' is always in the air and the shady veranda is a standing invitation for refreshments and relaxation. The soft spoken hostess, just as if she's read your thoughts, places a cup of coffee or frosty punch in your hand. Soon you are at least ten degrees cooler and much, much happier.

Whether it's an improvised get-together when friends stop by or an elegantly planned community affair, hot humid days call for the thirst-quenching magic of Southern Coffee Punch. The secret of this delightfully refreshing drink is cool, deep-flavored coffee combined with vanilla ice cream.

With weddings and graduations cropping up, southern belles from Savannah to New Orleans will choose this coffee cooler for their buffet table. Incidentally, when it comes to partying most of us seem to be southerners at heart. If you're faced with warm weather entertaining, no matter where you may be, keep it cool with Southern Coffee Punch.

Southern Coffee Punch

2 quarts strong cold coffee
1 pint cold milk
2 teaspoons vanilla
½ cup sugar
1 quart vanilla ice cream
½ pint heavy cream, whipped
Nutmeg

Combine cold coffee, milk, vanilla and sugar in large bowl. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Chill thoroughly. At serving time, pour over ice cream in punch bowl and top with whipped cream. Sprinkle lightly with nutmeg. Makes 15 to 18 punch cup servings.

Go-Go-Go Scotch Fudge Teen Delight

Here's a great foolproof butterscotch fudge for teeners — and they can do it themselves, Mom. There's no measuring (ingredients go straight from containers to cookery with nary a measuring cup). There's no fancy work with candy thermometers. There are only three ingredients in Go-Go-Go Scotch Fudge and they all work to the best advantage. The first ingredient, butterscotch flavored morsels, blends with the second ingredient, peanut butter, to create a wonderfully rich and different flavor big and little kids will go for. Sweetened condensed milk, the third ingredient, gives the fudge a smooth, creamy texture that won't get grainy.

Go-Go-Go Scotch Fudge

2 6-ounce packages (2 cups) butterscotch flavored morsels
1 12-ounce jar (1¼ cups) peanut butter
1 14-ounce can (1¼ cups) sweetened condensed milk

Combine butterscotch morsels and peanut butter in top of double boiler. Place over hot (not boiling) water; stir until butterscotch melts and mixture is smooth. Remove from water. Add sweetened condensed milk; stir until well blended. Turn into foil-lined 8-inch square pan. Chill until firm. Cut in 1-inch squares. Store in covered container. YIELD: 64 pieces.

New Do-It-Yourself Spring Salad

Perfect for a picnic or potluck supper or patio entertaining, "Lazy Susan Salad" is strictly an assemble-your-own salad for leisurely eating on a warm day.

All the ingredients — ham, marinated vegetables, cottage cheese, onion rings, lettuce wedges and creamy dressing — are right there on a big platter awaiting your pleasure.

A few serving tips: Use the outer leaves of the western iceberg lettuce as attractive "cups" for the other foods. Refrigerate for at least one hour the vegetables — cooked cauliflowerettes, carrots, lima beans or whatever your choice — so that their marinade of corn oil and vinegar can "go to work." And chill the dressing of sprightly seasoned dairy sour cream and real mayonnaise to allow time for proper blending of flavors.

Lazy Susan Salad

1 cup dairy sour cream
½ cup real mayonnaise
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon onion powder
8 wedges western iceberg lettuce
3 cups cooked vegetables, marinated in corn oil, vinegar and seasonings to taste
1 cup red onion rings
1 pint cottage cheese
2 cups julienne cooked ham

Blend sour cream with mayonnaise, lemon juice, mustard, salt and onion powder. Place in bowl in center of large round platter. Arrange lettuce wedges alternately with marinated vegetables, onion rings, cheese and ham around edge of platter. Makes 8 servings.

Four Men To Be Honored By Missouri University

The University of Missouri at Columbia will confer honorary degrees upon four of its former students as a part of the program for the 124th annual commencement exercises June 7, Chancellor John W. Schwada announced here today.

The recipients will be James A. Finch Jr., justice of the Missouri Supreme Court, who will be the Commencement speaker, and Ward A. Barnes, superintendent of schools of the Normandy School District, both of whom will receive Doctor of Law degrees; Harry F. Barr, vice president in charge of engineering staff for General Motors, and Douglas Ensminger, Ford Foundation representative in India since 1953, who will received Doctor of Scence degrees.

Mr. Barnes is married to the former Miss Juliamma Marshall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A.H. Marshall of Charleston. He is the nephew of Mrs. Moore Greer of Sikeston.

Judge Finch, named to the Supreme Court last year, long has been identified with the University through serving from 1951 until 1965 as a member of the Board of Curators and as president of the Board for 10 years.

A native of St. Louis who was reared in southeast Missouri, Judge Finch was graduated with scholastic honors from the University's College of Arts and Science in 1930 and School of Law in 1932. He previously attended Southeast Missouri State College at Cape Girardeau, where he returned to establish his law practice.

BARNES, NATIVE of Webster City, Ia., has spent 36 years in the Normandy School District, 17 as elementary principal and 19 as superintendent, and previously was an instructor for three years at the University and a rural school teacher for a year in St. Louis County. He is a graduate of Northwest Missouri State College at Maryville and took his master's at Missouri University.

He has been president of the Missouri State teachers Association, Missouri Association of School Administrators, St. Louis County Teachers Association, and Cooperating Superintendents and School Boards of St. Louis County and is a curator of Central Methodist College at Fayette. He has received gubernatorial appointments to the interim study committee on education and the commission to study education beyond the high school, and was chairman of the committee which drafted the junior college law.

Barnes received the "Page-One Civic Award" in 1963 of the St. Louis Newspaper Guild for his work in establishing the University of Missouri at St. Louis in Normandy and that year he represented the United States as a guest, with other superintendents, of the Swedish government and Swedish industry for a five-week study of Swedish education.

ENSMINGER, NATIVE of Stover, received agriculture and master degrees (in rural public welfare) at Missouri U. before taking his doctorate at Cornell University.

Dr. Ensminger gave the first Dag Hammarskjold Memorial Lecture at Columbia University and is author and co-author of a number of books on rural life, community development, and India. He is chairman of the board of governors of the American International School at New Delhi.

BARR, A NATIVE of Enid, Okla., studied mechanical engineering at M.U. before taking a bachelor's degree in automotive engineering in 1929 at the University of Detroit. He has been with General Motors in various capacities since that time.

He formerly was chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor Division for seven years, and assistant chief engineer both for Cadillac and Chevrolet.

Military Personnel Discriminated Again In Parcel Post Laws

The discriminatory effects of present parcel post laws affecting military personnel, were pointed out today by Pleas Malcolm on behalf of the National Association of Postmasters.

"Parents in Sikeston cannot mail larger or bulkier parcels to sons and daughters at hundreds of military installations served by first class post offices in the United States," Mr. Malcolm, who is postmaster of Sikeston, Missouri, declared.

Mr. Malcolm said this discriminatory treatment -- which does not apply to parents in small communities -- was pointed out in an analysis of present corrective legislation before Congress by President James O'Toole of the National Association of Postmasters in Washington, D. C.

In speaking as a representative of the Association, Mr. Malcolm listed some typical discrimatory situations in which the restrictive parcel limitations can apply for mail going to or from military personnel at many points.

1. A civic group collects gifts for the local people in military service -- such as records, canned food specialities, some types of clothing for civilian wear, etc., but cannot send it as a single parcel because it weighs more than 20 pounds. If sent, it must be broken up into two or more parcels at greater cost and with resulting inconvenience.

2. A group of local men away in military service ask to be sent records, a record player, and similar items for their camp club -- but it cannot be sent by parcel post.

3. Parents want to send some new luggage for a son to use on furlough, putting some books and personal effects in it. It cannot go by parcel post because it is too heavy or too bulky.

4. A local women's group organizes a drive for candy, cakes and gifts for a dozen local boys away at a military installation. It is likely to be too big a package to go by parcel post.

Similar limitations apply on parcels mailed home at first class post offices by military personnel. Mr. Malcolm said:

"At the same time, at any nearby smaller second, third or fourth class post office the same parcels can be sent because these post offices have a 70 pound, 100 inch limitation. Mailers on rural routes out of first class post offices also have this right."

"As a result of legislation effective in 1952, enacted to favor Railway Express Agency, parcels going between first class post offices (those in large cities) 150 miles or more apart are restricted to 20 pound and 72 inch dimensions," the National Association's Representative said.

If the first class post offices are less than 150 miles apart, the limitations are 40 pounds and 72 inches, he noted.

Hundreds of such first class offices serving Army posts, camps and stations and Air Force Bases, fields and installations are listed in the Directory of Post Offices.

Corrective legislation passed the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, with the number H. R. 14904. A 17 to 3 vote for the bill indicates an excellent chance of passage in Congress, Mr. Malcolm said.

He said reports disseminated by the express agency that the legislation would deprive REA employees of jobs were not correct.

"President O'Toole of the National Association has advised me," Mr. Malcolm said, "that the Department has expressed complete willingness to rehire any REA employees who might lose their jobs under this legislation -- although the Association emphasizes there is no basis in the first place for any such fears of job losses as a result of this bill."

In addition to ending discriminatory provisions against mailings between first class post offices -- applying to regular military personnel in this country and to mailings of civilians -- the bill provides about $107 million in additional revenue through moderate rate increases to prevent a parcel post deficit.

Four I-55 Jobs in Program

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- A work and right of way program for interstate, primary and urban highway projects in southeast Missouri for the next fiscal year includes continued I-55 development in Pemiscot and New Madrid counties and a Highway 61 improvement in Sikeston.

Plans for the fiscal year beginning July 1 as released by the State Highway Department are for a $128,248,000 statewide program extending over 468.6 miles.

Three I-55 projects, which stretch end to end from the present terminal point south of New Madrid to a point south of Hayti, are slated for work this year. Together, the three projects account for 27.6 miles.

The state plans to begin construction -- grading, bridging and paving -- of a 14-mile section extending southward from the present end of I-55.

This will take the superhighway into Pemiscot County by about two miles.

I-55 BYPASS

A 4.2 mile Hayti bypass for I-55 is also planned for the coming year.

Other interstate work slated in the district involves I-57 and I-53, a spur which is to connect I-55 at Hayti with the Mississipi River near Caruthersville.

A project to fence 12.3 miles of I-57 from Sikeston to east of Charleston is scheduled for next year.

The I-55 project will involve right of way acquisition for the 10.3 mile highway.

The only urban project on next year's schedule is for Highway 61 in Sikeston, which will be widened to four lanes from Business Route 61 to Highway 62, a distance of 1.8 miles.

Primary system work in the next fiscal year includes two jobs on Highway 25 and one on Highway 62.

The balance of right of way for a 2.5 mile Highway 25 project through Bernie will be acquired and the grading, paving, lighting and signal installation will be started.

The remainder of right of way also will be acquired for a six mile Highway 25 project from Route V to Route F in Dunklin County.

A bridge extension will be made on Highway 62 in New Madrid County.

Lightest Mexico

by John Abney

Mexico City - The National Confederation of Chambers of Commerce has in effect called on the Mexican Government to halt further influx of foreign capital into Mexico's organized business.

The Confederation, in a letter to the Ministry of Industry and Commerce, said that "the commercial sector should be protected by the authorities via action which opposes all new foreign investment in the national business field."

These efforts to avoid further competition from foreign investment in general business fields here came to light when the Confederation made known an interchange of letters on the problem between the Confederation president Armando Fernandez and the Ministry's Ernesto Ramirez Solano, Director General of business operations.

The Confederation took its action following a petition by nine member firms which "expressed their fears of the possible adverse competition they would face with the establishment here of a very important foreign-owned department store chain.'

While no mention was made of the organization in question, it is believed the reference is made to the J.C. Penny Co. of the United States, which is considering operations in Mexico.

The Confederation organization said that foreign capital should not be allowed into a Mexican business sector "which is sufficiently well attended by existing national investments."

Ramirez Solano, in referring to the Confederation, said that the Ministry understood the concern of that organization but also discussed at length the various regulations, written and unwritten, covering foreign investment in Mexico.

He added that his office would like to discuss the matter further with the Confederation officials "to resolve this particular situation."

But at the same time he stressed that as far as organized business in Mexico is concerned, foreign investment entering this field will be considered (by government authorities) in the same light as foreign investment in any of a number of other diverse economic sectors where such investment is not already specifically excluded by law.

Ramirez Solano also said that such foreign capital has every right to establish itself in Mexico, although adding that the government would prefer its entry into the market here on a "mixed capital" basis. In other words, in association with national investors.

The Confederation said there is no need for new foreign investments in the Mexican business sector. It maintained that "we now operate a modern agile and efficient distribution and sales apparatus and plan further modernization, expansion, new investments and better marketing techniques."

Despite the Confederation's petition against more foreign capital, the experts point out that investments are protected by the Mexican government, which still is encouraging the influx of foreign capital in certain fields.

SUNDAY JUNE 5TH DIRECT DIALING FOR MOREHOUSE

Direct Distance Dailing, the telephone system that allows customers to dial their own station - to - station Long Distance calls, will go into service Sunday, June 5, for all Morehouse eight - party rural telephone customers.

"During the past two weeks, we've notified all customers who will get the new DDD service," John Donoho, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company manager, said.

"I'd just like to remind everyone again to take advantage of the new service," he added.

All Morehouse rural and city telephone customers, with the exception of coin customers, will now be able to dial their own station - to - station calls. Instruction booklets which explain the system in detail have been mailed to all customers who get the new service Sunday, June 5.

For Long Distance calls other than station - to - station, Morehouse rural telephone customers will dial "O" as they do now. The operator will place person - to - person, collect, credit card and bill-to-third-number Long Distance calls.

Donoho outlined the steps for placing a DDD call. "Just lift your receiver, dial the digit '1' followed by the three-digit Area Code and the distant telephone number. The operator will come in and ask for the telephone number you're calling from. It's just that easy," he pointed out.

Navy Serviceman Attempts To Sell Secret Information

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON AP -- A Navy serviceman assigned to routine duties in a "top secret" area methodically collected highly sensitive information and tried to sell it to the Soviets, it was learned today.

As a result, the Navy is tightening its security system around the world.

The Navy turned aside all questions about the case by saying that it is "under active investigation" and that "other details are classified."

Since the man involved held a secret clearance, it can be assumed that he had undergone a fairly stringent security check beforehand.

There was no indication of the specific nature of the material he tried to sell or whether the Soviets bought it. On these points, too, the Navy refused to talk.

The previously undisclosed case came to light in a notice to all ships and stations signed by Rear Adm. Rufus L. Taylor, director of the Office of Naval Intelligence.

The notice was intended, it said, to advise commanders "of the danger inherent in our present security system whereby an individual who has access to secret information may, through the peculiar nature of his duties, gain access to top sceret information without an appropriate clearance."

It went on to say that "as a result of a recent case involving the compromise of classified material, a weakness in our security system was brought to the attention of the chief of naval operations."

Then it told the story, without giving any names or indication of where the espionage incident occurred.

It said a serviceman who had duties as a "watch stander," officer supply clerk, and repairman was placed on a list permitting access to spaces where top secret information was discussed.

As a result of his frequent appearances in the sensitive spaces, the notice said "authorized personnel "failed to challenge his need-to-know.

Further, the commanders were told, the authorized personnel "failed to challenge his need-to-know.

"Through observation and pertinent questions, the serviceman managed to collect and collate information classified top secret," it added.

"In this case he contacted the Soviets with the intent of engaging in espionage for a monetary gain."

An average of more than 25,000 ships arrive and depart annually from the port of New York, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

Bloomfield Lions Club Installs Officers

BLOOMFIELD - Installation ceremonies highlighted the regular Tuesday morning meeting of the Bloomfield Lions Club. Amid regular business activities new officers for the coming year were sworn into office. Past President Les Brown will officially hand the gavel to the new president, Bloyce Unger, at the next Lion meeting. Slated to serve with Mr. Unger will be Bill Cowgur, secretary-treasurer; Jesse Kelley, 1st vice president; Harold Jones, 2nd vice president; Bill Woods, Lion Tamer and Jim Walker, Tail Twister.

Unger upon being sworn in pledged a continuation of the club toward the betterment of this area and the continuation of the high standards that the club has achieved in state and local projects.

The standards of Lionism were raised and recognized statewide recently when the Bloomfield club donated $500 to the University of Missouri Eye Bank project. This donation was accomplished through the proceeds of the Globetrotter basketball game held in April by the local club. The support of this project depends entirely upon donations received from Lions clubs throughout the state of Missouri.

The club gained another member with the acceptance of Ronnie Wiggs. Mr. Wiggs is a Bloomfield businessman associated with the Wiggs Insurance Agency.

FREE ENTERPRISE AND THE GOLDEN RULE

It is difficult to say what a man is worth who can guide a great enterprise to success. There are few men with such capacity. The directors of most com city. Thedirectors of most and bonuses to the men they want, because that is the only way to get top quality men. When high emoluments are freely offered to a man he can hardly be criticized for accepting them, any more than popular actors or singers can be criticized for accepting the rewards that are freely offered them. Less highly gifted management would undoubtedly result in fewer jobs, poorly paid jobs, or no jobs.

Futhermore, wise managers, owners and labor will share their success with the public in the form of lower prices. This will widen the market and make possible greater success for the company, those who own it and those who labor in it. The best and most equitable way to distribute the benefits resulting from more efficient means of production, is in the form of lower prices benefiting all the people. But where labor, management and owners demand it all, and exclude the public from participation in it through lower prices, their selfishness will result in a smaller degree of success than the company otherwise might achieve. Fairness as well as self interest demands that the public receive a part of what - ever savings can be made by the introduction of more efficient means of production. Lower prices and ever widening markets mean an expanding prosperity for all segments of the population. Any attempt to shut out the public from sharing in industrial and technological advance, by demanding that all possible benefits be paid to labor, management or owners, is self defeating and will retard a general advance in the standard of living for all people.

And so we come right back to the golden rule: Whatever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them. The religious precepts and maxims which the saints and the prophets of all ages have enunciated and which are better set forth in the Old and New Testaments of the Bible than in any other place are, after all is said and done, the best rules by which to govern our conduct. This is the only way to a peaceable, prosperous, free and self governing society.

Miller Announces Study To Be Made Of Sikeston

City Manager Raymert Miller disclosed yesterday that a comprehensive study is to be made of Sikeston and the "probable future urban area of the city" by Harland Bartholomew and Associates, a planners engineering company from St. Louis.

Miller said he study would cover a period between now and 1985 and would include "at least" all of the area within one mile of the city limits.

Eldridge Lovelace, who is in charge of the St. Louis office, said the plan would follow a basic three - step procedure.

ONE--"Representatives from this office would come to Sikeston to make necessary surveys of land use traffic, and housing conditions. This will allow the study team to become familiar with existing conditions. Also, from our studies we will prepare a tentative draft of the comprehensive plan. From the drafts, we will hold discussions with local officials, and with the City Council and Planning Commission.

TWO -- "Following such discussions, we would make whatever modifications were deemed appropriate in the plans. We will then prepare and present a preliminary report about the study. Public meetings and hearings should be held for discussion of the report. A citizens advisory committee should be established for the purpose of reviewing the plan.

THREE -- "Following the public study, the plan as modified should be officially adopted. Following a period of 18 months after initiation of work, the plan would be brought up - to - date and we would submit the final report officially adopted."

There will be four "major phases" of the plan, land use, transportation, facilities and a public improvements program.

Work is scheduled to be initiated within two weeks after notification to proceed is issued by the Division of Commerce and Industrial Development.

Lovelace said a "tentative" city plan could be completed within eight months after they were authorized to proceed.

Estimated cost of the study to the city is $4,500. Total cost of the study is expected to be $13,500, two-thirds of which will be financed with federal monies.

Miller said it is considered essential that a city comparable to the size of Sikeston have such studies and evaluations made in order to continue steady and stable growth patterns.

In addition rural home delivery is being made on Highway 114 from Morehouse to Dexter, Highway 25 from Dexter to Advance and Routes P, N and Y in Stoddard County, Mr. Greene added.

Residents of Stoddard County will be supplied with fresh news since the papers are taken from the Standard's office at 2:30 p.m. for home delivery outside the Sikeston city limits, he explained.

Dealers distributing the Standard in Stoddard county are Harry Jennings, Dexter; Gertrude Greene, Bloomfield; Lester Swindell, Bell City; Harold Blankenship, Advance, and Cliff Johnson, Gray Ridge.

Persons wishing to receive the home delivery of the Standard may contact their area dealer or mail a card to The Daily Standard, 205 South New Madrid, Sikeston, and the Standard will forward the information to the dealer, Mr. Greene said.

Ten Injured

Ten persons were injured in area accidents over the past 24 hours, according to the state patrol.

In an accident Tuesday at 10:15 a.m. on a country lane in Jackson, two cars were involved in an accident on a blind curve, resulting in the arrest of the driver of a 1965 Volkswagen, Billy S. Henderson, 32, route two, Jackson, for careless and imprudent driving.

He struck a 1952 Ford dumptruck, driven by John Kester, 32, also of route two, Jackson. Henderson received cuts on the shoulder and was taken to a Jackson physician.

Charles Delner White, 21, Paragould, Ark., is in serious condition in St. Bernard Hospital, Jonesboro, Ark., when his 1957 Studebaker struck a bridge

NAYLOR - The Murdock Appliance Company was robbed sometime early Tuesday morning, with an estimated $1,000 loss in merchandise, ranging from small to large items.

Among the items taken were television sets, toasters and other electrical appliances. Entrance was gained by tearing a board from the back door.

Don't Follow Fogging Machine

A plea came from City Manager Raymert Miller's office yesterday asking parents to caution their children about following the mosquito fogging machine. He said the children were creating a traffic hazard and hindering the operator of the truck.

Miller also warned that being directly in the line of fire of the fog could prove harmful to a person and his clothing.

Rain Damages Crops

EAST PRAIRIE -- Sam Tanksley, energetic trucker and produce raiser of Mississippi and surrounding counties, stands to lose the majority of his garden produce for this year, following the torrential rains.

Nevertheless, there is always a spark of optimism about Sam, who expects to recoup some of his loss by putting out several late summer crops.

Let us suppose that if the average planter put out around 250 acres of potatoes, and lost all but about 95 acres, it would cause many a grower to throw up his hands in disgust.

This is not true with Sam Tanksley, in spite of the huge loss of $240 per acre on his potato crop, which rottened in the fields, due to the long standing of water over his blooming plants.

It so happened that eastern Mississippi county suffered the greatest water damage, causing many farmers with large acreage to lose a good portion of their corn crop and most of their cotton crop.

Tanksley also lost heavily on several patches of watermelons, with only 30 of his total 65 acres salvaged from the heavy rains.

He also suffered a loss of 60 acres of corn; planted near his home at the west city limits of East Prairie. Water stood on the field for many days, covering the 10-inch plants for several days, turning them yellow. The field is an entire loss, as a pre-emerge chemical, atrazine, was used, making it impossible to be replanted to another crop.

He saved several fields of potatoes in the northern part of Scott county on the Eddie Fuchs farm, while a field near Blodgett is still in good condition.

As Tanksley stated, "it was the highest rainfall ever recorded in my memory," and

Hospital Fund Drive Raising Now Declared 'Underway"

It was announced today by the Missouri Delta Community Hospital Steering Committee that a fund raising campaign to raise approximately $600,000 to finance construction of the badly needed additional hospital facilities is underway.

Construction will begin very soon on a basement and three floor addition to the present hospital facility. Added services such as cobalt therapy, resident pathological services, intensive care, enlarged emergency facilities, and physical therapy plus an ultimate 90 patient bed addition will be realized through this program.

The actual cost will not be known until bids are received from contractors on June 22, 1966. It is anticipated, however, that cost will exceed $2,000,000.

Efforts to finance this construction program began in May 1964. A Steering Committee consisting of Kenneth Smitton and C. L. "Val" Sharp as Co-Chairman and Kendall Sikes, Robert Matthews, Jim Bogle, Earl Jarvis, Bob Mitchell, George Story, William Gemeinhardt, Harry Dudley and E. P. Coleman, members, was appointed and charged with the responsibility of securing the necessary funds to finance the construction program.

The firm of Buchmueller-Whitworth & Associates was selected by the Board of Directors to design the proposed structure. This firm joined hospital administration in immediately submitting an application for Hill-Harris Funds to the appropriate office in Jefferson City.

The hospital submitted a request for participation in the amount of $1,200,000 with the understanding that as concrete information was compiled, the application would be revised and resubmitted in May 1965.

The Steering Committee realized that the cost of construction would not be lesser than $1,200,000, began an advanced gifts campaign to secure local funds adequate to finance 50 per cent of the original estimate of cost or $600,000. This program was sparked in November 1964 by an announcement from Mr. E. P. Coleman, President of the Board of Directors, that he and Mrs. Coleman had decided to contribute $400,000 to the advanced gifts campaign. After this announcement, interested citizens came forth with their contributions and in a short time the advanced gifts campaign was ended. At this point, it was decided by the Steering Committee that all efforts to raise additional funds would cease until a more accurate estimate of the total cost of construction could be ascertained.

In May 1965, a revised application was submitted to the Hill-Harris office in Jefferson City. Approval of this application has now been received and the hospital has been assured of receiving $915,000 from the Hill-Harris program.

Mr. E. P. Coleman, President of the Board of Directors of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital commented: "The rigors of 24 months negotiation with governmental agencies both on State and Federal levels has been successfully concluded. We have secured maximum Hill-Harris Funds for this project. The time has now come when each citizen of our community will have an opportunity to contribute to this institution which is so necessary to each of us."

In an effort to bring the financing program to a speedy and successful conclusion, a professional fund raising organization has been obtained. The cost for this service is being met by anonymous donors, therefore, all of an individual's contribution will go to the Hospital Building Program.

The campaign headquarters for the hospital fund raising program is located in the old Scott County Milling Company Building adjacent to the Bank of Sikeston Building. Mr. Page Keown, Professional Fund-raising Counselor, who represents the Patrick Organization, Inc., invites the public to drop by and get acquainted.

Mr. Kenneth Smitten and Mr. Val Sharp, Co-Chairmen of the Steering Committee made this comment, "Very soon each citizen will have an opportunity to lend his support to our community hospital. It is impossible to enumerate the benefits to those who have needed and will need its services. How comforting it is to know that life-saving equipment, drugs, and know-how are maintained so immediately accessible to all of us."

Mr. Coleman commented: "I know of nothing really worthwhile that can be bought cheaply. Whether the purchase price is measured in terms of work hours or dollars, it is one and the same thing. Our hospital is vital to those of our community. New industry would not consider coming to Sikeston without an adequate health facility. Present industry probably would not have chosen Sikeston if our hospital had not been available for their employees. It is most important that each of us get behind and support the needs of this most worthwhile institution. Whether our reasons be economic or personal, they are most important."

Miller Fined

George Miller, 223 North West, was fined $12 in City Court this morning by Judge E. R. Schrader for public intoxication.

Gemini Nine Flight Scrubbed For Second Time

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. AP -- The hard-luck Gemini 9 flight was postponed two days today because of last-minute problems that prevented the Titan 2 rocket from being launched.

The space walk and rendezvous mission was rescheduled for 9:39 a.m. EDT Friday.

The flight was called off at 12:40 p.m. as the astronauts, Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan, waited out the countdown while sealed in their cramped Gemini 9 spacecraft atop a nine-story tall Titan 2 rocket.

The target satellite which the astronauts were to chase across the sky had been fired into space at 11 a.m. from another launching pad 6,000 feet away.

"I just can't believe it," said Cernan, a 32-year-old space rookie disappointed for the second straight time in his goal to take the longest space walk in history.

There was a hint of trouble with the target satellite, even though it entered a near perfect circular orbit. Ground stations were unable to confirm that a shroud covering the docking collar had fallen away as planned.

If the shroud did not come off, the astronauts will not be able to link up with the target, but will be able to carry out rendezvous missions.

Until they get within eyesight of the target, they will not know whether the shroud is off.

The guidance problem in the Gemini 9 spacecraft was not discovered until less than two minutes before it was to blast off on a three-day mission.

The countdown on the Titan 2 proceeded smoothly down to 1 minute, 40 seconds before liftoff. Then a hold was called and the count was recycled to three minutes and holding when a new signal was rejected by a computer in the spacecraft.

The guidance signal was designed to adjust the computer so that it would steer the Titan 2 into the proper path to begin the pursuit of the target.

The count was resumed twice in hope of sending the signal through but each time it was rejected.

In order to catch the target today, the Titan 2 would have had to have been launched in a six-minute period ending at 12:44 p.m. EDT.

When it became apparent the condition could not be corrected in time, mission director William C. Schneider called the launch off for two days. The reason is that the target satellite will not be in position for a pursuit until Friday morning.

The space agency will have six minutes to get the Gemini off the ground the first time Friday morning. If that doesn't work, it will have 35 more minutes beginning at 11:15 a.m. the same day.

For Stafford and Cernan, it was the second disappointment in 15 days. On May 17, their flight was scrubbed when an Agena target satellite failed to go into orbit.

For Stafford, it was the fifth trip up to a spacecraft cabin to await a launch, and the fourth time he has been frustrated.

A barrel - shaped satellite rocketed into orbit today but may have remained locked in a fiberglass shroud that would destroy its usefulness as a docking target for the Gemini 9 astronauts.

The launch of the satellite by a fiery Atlas appeared perfect --until information came that the shroud, designed to protect the vehicle from buffeting and heat during the blastoff, may not have dropped away.

The 90-inch, 300-pound shroud covers the collar with which astronauts Thomas P. Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan planned to link up with the satellite late today after a 75,000-mile pursuit.

One hour after the satellite launching, mission control at Houston said there would be no way of determining whether the shroud fell off until Stafford and Cernan approached the satellite for a visual check.

Miller Announces Study To Be Made Of Sikeston

City Manager Raymert Miller disclosed yesterday that a comprehensive study is to be made of Sikeston and the "probable future urban area of the city" by Harland Bartholomew and Associates, a planners engineering company from St. Louis.

Miller said he study would cover a period between now and 1985 and would include "at least" all of the area within one mile of the city limits.

Eldridge Lovelace, who is in charge of the St. Louis office, said the plan would follow a basic three - step procedure.

ONE--"Representatives from this office would come to Sikeston to make necessary surveys of land use traffic, and housing conditions. This will allow the study team to become familiar with existing conditions. Also, from our studies we will prepare a tentative draft of the comprehensive plan. From the drafts, we will hold discussions with local officials, and with the City Council and Planning Commission.

TWO -- "Following such discussions, we would make whatever modifications were deemed appropriate in the plans. We will then prepare and present a preliminary report about the study. Public meetings and hearings should be held for discussion of the report. A citizens advisory committee should be established for the purpose of reviewing the plan.

THREE -- "Following the public study, the plan as modified should be officially adopted. Following a period of 18 months after initiation of work, the plan would be brought up - to - date and we would submit the final report officially adopted."

There will be four "major phases" of the plan, land use, transportation, facilities and a public improvements program.

Work is scheduled to be initiated within two weeks after notification to proceed is issued by the Division of Commerce and Industrial Development.

Lovelace said a "tentative" city plan could be completed within eight months after they were authorized to proceed.

Estimated cost of the study to the city is $4,500. Total cost of the study is expected to be $13,500, two-thirds of which will be financed with federal monies.

Miller said it is considered essential that a city comparable to the size of Sikeston have such studies and evaluations made in order to continue steady and stable growth patterns.

Standard Begins Stoddard County Home Delivery

The Daily Standard this week is beginning home delivery in Stoddard County to supply residents of that area with fresh daily news, Glenn Greene, Standard circulation manager reported.

Towns receiving the home delivery are Gray Ridge, Circle City, Essex, Bloomfield, Advance, Painton, Perkins, Bell City and Dexter, he noted.

In addition rural home delivery is being made on Highway 114 from Morehouse to Dexter, Highway 25 from Dexter to Advance and Routes P, N and Y in Stoddard County, Mr. Greene added.

Residents of Stoddard County will be supplied with fresh news since the papers are taken from the Standard's office at 2:30 p.m. for home delivery outside the Sikeston city limits, he explained.

Dealers distributing the Standard in Stoddard county are Harry Jennings, Dexter; Gertrude Greene, Bloomfield; Lester Swindell, Bell City; Harold Blankenship, Advance, and Cliff Johnson, Gray Ridge.

Persons wishing to receive the home delivery of the Standard may contact their area dealer or mail a card to The Daily Standard, 205 South New Madrid, Sikeston, and the Standard will forward the information to the dealer, Mr. Greene said.

Mrs. Helen Reuber Is Honored at Drury Banquet

Mrs. Helen Maline Reuber was one of three alumni of Drury College at Springfield honored and presented distinguished service awards at an alumni-senior banquet there last week.

Mrs. Reuber, a 1929 graduate of Drury, received her masters degree from the University of Denver and is now a guidance counselor for Sikeston senior high school.

Active in civic activities, Mrs. Reuber is director and organizer of choir groups for her church. She is one of Missouri's honorary colonels, and Woman of the Year in Sikeston in 1962.

She is president of the local chapter of American Association of University Women, of the Sikeston Women's Club and Sikeston Study Club. She is on the Library Board of Directors as well as a member of the board of directors of a local radio station.

Mrs. Reuber is a musician as well as a teacher and is a board member of the Community Concert Association and on the Board of Sikeston Little Theatre. She has been influential in curbing the drop - out problem with her interest in students.

NAYLOR - The Murdock Appliance Company was robbed sometime early Tuesday morning, with an estimated $1,000 loss in merchandise, ranging from small to large items.

Among the items taken were television sets, toasters and other electrical appliances. Entrance was gained by tearing a board from the back door.

Don't Follow Fogging Machine

A plea came from City Manager Raymert Miller's office yesterday asking parents to caution their children about following the mosquito fogging machine. He said the children were creating a traffic hazard and hindering the operator of the truck.

Miller also warned that being directly in the line of fire of the fog could prove harmful to a person and his clothing.

Ten Injured

Ten persons were injured in area accidents over the past 24 hours, according to the state patrol.

In an accident Tuesday at 10:15 a.m. on a country lane in Jackson, two cars were involved in an accident on a blind curve, resulting in the arrest of the driver of a 1965 Volkswagen, Billy S. Henderson, 32, route two, Jackson, for careless and imprudent driving.

He struck a 1952 Ford dump-truck, driven by John Kester, 32, also of route two, Jackson. Henderson received cuts on the shoulder and was taken to a Jackson physician.

Rain Damages Crops

EAST PRAIRIE -- Sam Tanksley, energetic trucker and produce raiser of Mississippi and surrounding counties, stands to lose the majority of his garden produce for this year, following the torrential rains.

Nevertheless, there is always a spark of optimism about Sam, who expects to recoup some of his loss by putting out several late summer crops.

Let us suppose that if the average planter put out around 250 acres of potatoes, and lost all but about 95 acres, it would cause many a grower to throw up his hands in disgust.

This is not true with Sam Tanksley, in spite of the huge loss of $240 per acre on his potato crop, which rottened in the fields, due to the long standing of water over his blooming plants.

It so happened that eastern Mississippi county suffered the greatest water damage, causing many farmers with large acreage to lose a good portion of their corn crop and most of their cotton crop.

Tanksley also lost heavily on several patches of watermelons, with only 30 of his total 65 acres salvaged from the heavy rains.

He also suffered a loss of 60 acres of corn; planted near his home at the west city limits of East Prairie. Water stood on the field for many days, covering the 10-inch plants for several days, turning them yellow. The field is an entire loss, as a pre-emerge chemical, atrazine, was used, making it impossible to be replanted to another crop.

He saved several fields of potatoes in the northern part of Scott county on the Eddie Fuchs farm, while a field near Blodgett is still in good condition.

As Tanksley stated, "it was the highest rainfall ever recorded in my memory," and

Hospital Fund Drive Raising Now Declared "Underway"

It was announced today by the Missouri Delta Community Hospital Steering Committee that a fund raising campaign to raise approximately $600,000 to finance construction of the badly needed additional hospital facilities is underway.

Construction will begin very soon on a basement and three floor addition to the present hospital facility. Added services such as cobalt therapy, resident pathological services, intensive care, enlarged emergency facilities, and physical therapy plus an ultimate 90 patient bed addition will be realized through this program.

The actual cost will not be known until bids are received from contractors on June 22, 1966. It is anticipated, however, that cost will exceed $2,000,000.

Efforts to finance this construction program began in May 1964. A Steering Committee consisting of Kenneth Smitton and C. L. "Val" Sharp as Co-Chairman and Kendall Sikes, Robert Matthews, Jim Bogle, Earl Jarvis, Bob Mitchell, George Story, William Gemmhardt, Harry Dudley and E. P. Coleman, members, was appointed and charged with the responsibility of securing the necessary funds to finance the construction program.

The firm of Buchmueller-Whitworth & Associates was selected by the Board of Directors to design the proposed structure. This firm joined hospital administration in immediately submitting an application for Hill-Harris Funds to the appropriate office in Jefferson City.

The hospital submitted a request for participation in the amount of $1,200,000 with the understanding that as concrete information was compiled, the application would be revised and resubmitted in May 1965.

The Steering Committee realized that the cost of construction would not be lesser than $1,200,000, began an advanced gifts campaign to secure local funds adequate to finance 50 per cent of the original estimate of cost or $600,000. This program was sparked in November 1964 by an announcement from Mr. E. P. Coleman, President of the Board of Directors, that he and Mrs. Coleman had decided to contribute $400,000 to the advanced gifts campaign. After this announcement, interested citizens came forth with their contributions and in a short time the advanced gifts campaign was ended. At this point, it was decided by the Steering Committee that all efforts to raise additional funds would cease until a more accurate estimate of the total cost of construction could be ascertained.

In May 1965, a revised application was submitted to the Hill-Harris office in Jefferson City. Approval of this application has now been received and the hospital has been assured of receiving $915,000 from the Hill-Harris program.

Mr. E. P. Coleman, President of the Board of Directors of the Missouri Delta Community Hospital commented; "The rigors of 24 months negotiation with governmental agencies both on State and Federal levels has been successfully concluded. We have secured maximum Hill-Harris Funds for this project. The time has now come when each citizen of our community will have an opportunity to contribute to this institution which is so necessary to each of us."

In an effort to bring the financing program to a speedy and successful conclusion, a professional fund raising organization has been obtained. The cost for this service is being met by anonymous donors, therefore, all of an individual's contribution will go to the Hospital Building Program.

The campaign headquarters for the hospital fund raising program is located in the old Scott County Milling Company Building adjacent to the Bank of Sikeston Building. Mr. Page Keown, Professional Fund-raising Counselor, who represents the Patrick Organization, Inc., invites the public to drop by and get acquainted.

Mr. Kenneth Smitten and Mr. Val Sharp, Co-Chairmen of the Steering Committee made this comment, "Very soon each citizen will have an opportunity to lend his support to our community hospital. It is impossible to enumerate the benefits to those who have needed and will need its services. How comforting it is to know that life-saving equipment, drugs, and know-how are maintained so immediately accessible to all of us."

Mr. Coleman commented; "I know of nothing really worthwhile that can be bought cheaply. Whether the purchase price is measured in terms of work hours or dollars, it is one and the same thing. Our hospital is vital to those of our community. New industry would not consider coming to Sikeston without an adequate health facility. Present industry probably would not have chosen Sikeston if our hospital had not been available for their employees. It is most important that each of us get behind and support the needs of this most worthwhile institution. Whether our reasons be economic or personal, they are most important."

George Miller, 223 North West, was fined $12 in City Court this morning by Judge E. R. Schrader for public intoxication.

ANOTHER G. I. INVESTMENT

THE NEW G. I. BILL in part is an investment in the younger generation. Many of its provisions went into effect the day the measure was enacted into law -- last March 3. Educational benefits become effective on June 1.

To a degree the new benefits correspond to those provided under earlier G. I. bills, the landmark programs enacted for veterans of World War II and the Korean War. The new law, formally known as the Veterans' Readjustment Benefits Act of 1966, differs in providing somewhat lower cash allowances for education and in stricter eligibility requirements.

A G. I. Bill of Rights for post-Korean veterans had been before Congress for a decade. Passage finally came in February in a whirlwind fashion, with unanimous votes in both houses. Some congressmen said the bill did not do enough.

THE NUMBER of veterans receiving education and training allowances in the first year under the new law will average 251,000 in any given month. This figure will rise to 413,000 by 1970.

The program covers veterans who served on active duty for a period of more than 180 days, any part of which was served after Jan. 31, 1955, and who were discharged or released under conditions other than dishonorable. Benefits will be calculated on the basis of one month of aid for each month, or fraction, of service on active duty.

Eligible veterans discharged before June 1 will have eight years -- until May 31, 1974 -- to complete their programs. Those discharged later may receive educational benefits within eight years from the date of their discharge.

Monthly allowances are designed to meet in part the expenses of the veteran's subsistence, tuition, fees, supplies, books, equipment, and other educational costs. Cold War veterans will find, as did Korean G. I.'s, that the allowances will have to be supplemented by wages, savings, scholarships, or outside assistance. Full-time students will receive cash benefits of $100 a month; with one dependent, $125; with two or more dependents, $150. Part-time students or trainees will receive less.

THE NEW B. I. BILL will cost $358 million in the first year, $245 million more than President Johnson had budgeted for the year beginning July 1. Nevertheless, the President said on March 3: "Because it is for education, I am going to sign this bill, even though it provides hundreds of millions of dollars more than I thought it advisable to recommend or to ask for this year."

Undoubtedly the escalation of the fighting in Viet Nam weighed heavily upon Congress to pass the bill. Some votes may have been affected by a feeling that the new measure compensates, indirectly and only in the future, for a draft system that allows exemption for college students.

But a higher argument is available. The nation spent $14 billion on education for World War II vets, and about $2.4 billion for Korean vets. The first measure was a serendipitous miracle, for it gave America the skilled men and women she urgently needed in the aftermath of war. And the Veterans Administration concludes that the first G. I. Bill alone is paying for itself at close to $1 billion a year -- in the additional income taxes paid by those educated veterans.

ALLEY OOP, ATTENTION!

Time machines have been a favorite device of writers from H. G. Wells to V. T. Hamlin, creator of "Alley Oop."

Now a mechanical engineer comes along to say the idea isn't so fictional after all, that engineers already have a time machine of sorts at their disposal.

It is not, alas, something you can climb into and zip back and forth through history in, using a calendar for a speedometer. It is simply an ordinary analogue computer.

Computer operators already "travel" through time quite routinely, says Prof. Joseph E. Shigley of the University of Michigan. They begin a problem with time equal to zero (the present) but speed up the computations of the events they are investigating so that they take place faster than normally. Thus they are, in effect, looking into the future.

But apparently everyone has overlooked the fact that an analogue computer can also make time run backwards, says the professor.

Eureka! he cries. All an operator has to do is set up his program in the usual way as though he were going to operate with normal time flow -- that is, from present to future. Then he just places an inverter -- a simple electronic gismo that converts signals from positive to negative -- at the output of every integrator in the computer circuit. His time events will then run in reverse.

All kinds of interesting situations can then be analyzed, notes Shigley. "An automotive or aircraft collision is a typical investigative problem. One begins with the accident and solves the problem backwards in time to learn why it happened."

EXIT POUND, ENTER DOLLAR

The sun continues to set on the British currency system, with its inscrutable array of pence, shillings, crowns, and guineas. Australia, Sierra Leone and South Africa are only a few of the few British dependencies which have switched to decimal currency in recent years. The Bahamas, still very much a colony, will follow suit on Wednesday, May 25.

Because of its large tourist trade, the Bahamas has long operated on a dual currency of pounds and shillings for residents, dollars and cents for American visitors. This system probably will remain in effect. It would not be surprising, though, if Americans chose to use the attractively designed Bahamian dollars instead of their own.

The Bahamian five-dollar piece is the biggest silver coin -- both in dimension and denomination -- ever issued in the Western Hemisphere. Composed of 92.5 per cent fine silver, the five dollar cartwheel measures nearly one and three-quarters inches in diameter. The two-dollar, one-dollar and 5-cent coins also are silver. The remaining coins, predominantly of nickel or copper, are in denominations of 1,5,10, 15 and 25 cents. All are round except the 10-cent piece, which has a scalloped edge, and the 15-cent piece, which is square.

The days of the 20-shilling pound are clearly numbered. New Zealand plans to adopt the decimal system in 1967. And it is only a matter of time before Great Britain itself bows to the inevitable. A Committee of Inquiry on Decimal Currency recommended three years ago that the pound retain its present value and appearance but that it be divided into 100 cents. For psychological as well as technical reasons, the changeover in Britain may be more leisurely than elsewhere.

TEXAS -- ALL MINK AND A YARD WIDE

If you get a certain letter this week from Neiman-Marcus Company, which owns that Dallas department store, you can count yourself among 1,500 of the "wealthiest people in the world." The letter is a tender of the "finest mink coast in the world." It will sell for about $80,000, special order.

The Dallas store early in May bought 40 skins of the new Black Willow mink for $1,100 each, or $44,000, from the Hudson's Bay Fur Company at auction. According to the N. Y. Herald Tribune (May 7, 1966) Stanley Marcus, president of the store, "whistled when he heard the price, wished Mr. (George J.) Liebes (the buyer) luck, but came to New York (the next day) . . . just to see the skins."

Expensive coats are nothing new for NM. Some years ago it whipped up -- and sold -- a Sapphire or Cerulean mink at $40,000. For sable, poker goes up. The store has already hit the $80,000 neighborhood, which is a very nice neighborhood indeed, with sable.

The prospective buyers for the 80-grand mink job will be culled from the store's famous Christmas catalogue mailing list. This is the deal which offered several years ago a confidential shopping service for "customers who find themselves in the position of sending gifts to those in high position -- kings, shahs, maharajahs, prime ministers, and other dignitaries." Billing was to be by telephone only, and the nature of the gifts was to be divulged "only on a court subpeona."

Last year NM offered its clientele, among other things, a three-litre flacon of Shalimar perfume at a quick $2,500. But the vintage year for Neiman-Marcus was probably 1959, when the store offered its select list a gift-wrapped Black Angus steer, with roast beef serving cart, for $1,925.

By PHIL THOMAS

Which isn't a bad idea.

We have no idea what the movie is about, but its title could be a spur to the credit card economy.

Why not be able to rent a girl? And on credit.

It might help your career if you could.

That's because so many of the giant corporations are becoming more and more interested in the lives of their executives. They're no longer content to know all they can just about the man, they also want to know all about his wife.

And, often, the man might miss a coveted push up the executive ladder because, even though he meets all the firm's requirements, his wife doesn't.

Suppose you've got the kind of wife who likes to stay home nights and read the collected works of Shakespeare rather than going out on the town. This is fine in its fashion. But suppose you've also got a boss who's a swinger, a real drink-it-up, laugh-it-up until five o'clock in the morning kind of guy. He also is the guy who decides whether you get the promotion. And he decides he wants to meet your wife over dinner and drinks before making a decision about you.

What do you do? You know your wife will hate him, and he'll hate her. Don't panic. Just call your friendly "rent-a-wife" dealer. He'll put the proper wife in the party seat. Show him your credit card it might be expensive but you've got 30 days to pay and he'll run your request through a computer. In less than a minute it will pick out just the right woman to impress your boss- a fast-drinking, quick-laughing, redhead who can show your leader how to Watusi without giving him a heart attack.

You can pick up your "wife" yourself or she can be delivered, and in plenty of time for you to fill her in on what the boss expects in the wife of a rising junior executive.

The nicest thing is that when the evening is done and the sun is coming up you just return your rented wife to the store and drive on home to your real one.

No muss, no fuss, no bother.

TOMORROW

Alarmed by the fact that over 500 persons have been killed in Missouri traffic accidents during the first five months of the year, Colonel E. I. (Mike) Hockaday, the Highway Patrol Superintendent, has called upon motorists to take a second look at their driving habits.

"Most drivers want to be known as good drivers," he declared. "Any driver who wants to start his own safety campaign, can begin by checking habits. Being a good driver not only means driving with care, but also of being considerate of other drivers on the streets and highways."

Colonel Hockaday pointed out that characteristics of a good driver include keeping a safe distance behind other vehicles, slowing down when necessary for vehicles passing, dimming lights for oncoming traffic and sounding the horn when passing.

Courtesy on the highway is a good way to increase traffic safety. One thoughtless act can endanger the lives of many. "There are close to 90 million registered vehicles in the United States--over two million of them are right here in Missouri," the Colonel said. "With this potential traffic flow, everyone should realize that he must share the road and extend the same consideration to his fellow drivers as he would expect from them."

The Patrol Superintendent also pointed out that emotions often get the upper hand while driving. This may result in taking chances when confronted with a slow-poke, road hog or speedster. He stated that by accepting the fact that such drivers do exist and may be encountered unexpectedly, one is better adjusted emotionally for safer driving.

"You will probably be driving quite a bit during the next few months," Colonel Hockaday concluded. "I urge you to take stock of your driving habits and do everything possible to avoid a traffic accident."

Band leader Spike Jones was once investigated by the FBI, the Catholic Digest has discovered. Before a show in Washington at an affair honoring Harry Truman, agents discovered eight pistols, an oversized shotgun, and 3,500 rounds of ammunition among his band instruments. Spike finally convinced the FBI that the artillery was necessary for his unique arrangements.

ON WISHFUL THINKING

Nationalist China's UN Ambassador Liu Chieh has warned the free world that the so-called "split" between Red China and the USSR involves only a private quarrel over whether Moscow or Peiping is to be Red GHQ, and that the two are a greater threat to freedom today than ever before.

"The internationalist Communist movement," he said, "Cannot be contained by an exchange of trade, by a gesture of good will, by any formula of peaceful co-existence . . . . . Recent history shows that the free world is not containing the Communist world. On the contrary the Communist world has not only contained the free world, but has penetrated deeply into vast power in the developing areas of the world."

Ambassador Liu blasted our independence on status quo. "It is not an effective response to the militant challenge of the Communists," he said, "it is a disheartening echo to the silent cry of the millions behind the Iron and Bamboo curtains."

In the face of stepped-up Communist penetration in Asia, Africa and Latin-America, and in the light of our less-than-brilliant performance in South Vietnam, we, and the other free nations should face up to our need of what the Ambassador called a "dynamic policy."

And Red China's recent broad hint of nuclear capability and the development of Russia's Cuban operating base should remind us that time is running out.

THE RULE OF LAW

Several years have now passed since the strange idea began to be widely heard in our land that to break the law might be a noble act. At first directed toward a tragic situation in the relations of white and Negro Americans which had roused vehement emotions, this doctrine gained the sympathy of many good people who should have known better. Now they are beginning to realize its true meaning and inevitable consequence.

From "civil rights" protest, organized and deliberate flouting of the law has quickly become a standard tactic of political agitators for a great variety of unsavory causes. It is openly encouraged by the opponents of our war against communism in Viet Nam. It is even being used by those who protest the basic community standards of common decency.

Law, like freedom is indivisible. No part of it can be brought into public disrespect without all obedience to law suffering as a result. If a man may break a trespass law or a draft law because he personally disapproves of it, then he may rob and loot and rape and kill as well. He can count on finding many to defend him because of vague "pressures from society" which they say he is rebelling against.

The breakdown of the rule of law which began when distinguished Americans endorsed illegal demonstrations and trespassing led to the carnival of crime and destruction in Watts last August.

Now many Americans are taking a second look at the doctrine of "civil disobedience," and some who previously championed it are coming out in opposition. We may take heart from this rediscovery of reason. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Having made such a botch of their case in public senate hearings on auto safety, auto executives are now trying to do a better job in the closed - door sessions of the Senate Commerce committee.

This is where senators whip together the safety law which the auto industry will have to obey. Auto executives were not permitted inside the hearings. However, this column can report what happened last week, namely, that the industry has won over three key senators, all Democrats, who served in effect as auto spokesmen inside the closed - door sessions. They were:

Howard Cannon, Nevada, heretofore a tough advocate of auto safety, but who has been won over by his friend, Louis Spits, also of Nevada, chairman of the vehicle equipment safety commission, which is industry dominated.

Phil Hart of Detroit, a great champion of the consumer when it comes to truth - in - packaging, but now a genteel spokesman for Michigan's No. 1 industry -- automobiles.

Chief defenders of the public inside the closed - door hearing were Chairman Warren Magnuson, Wash., Maurine Neuberger, Ore., Russell Long, La., all Democrats, with Norris cotton, N. H., Republican.

SKILLED AUTO LOBBYISTS

Working frantically but skillfully on the outside were auto industry attorney Lloyd Cutter and Rodney Markley, Ford public relations man, who went from congressional office to office, endeavoring to soften the committee's proposal that auto companies which make dangerous or faulty cars be held criminally responsible.

Cutler and Markley indicated this was an insult to the auto industry, wanted no criminal liability at all. They called on almost every member of the Senate and House Commerce committees, plus Sens. Bobby Kennedy, D- N. Y., Abe Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Walter Mondale, D-Minn., who are not on the commerce committee.

Chief argument of the auto industry senators in the closed-door session was states rights. They argued that standards for building safer cars should be left to the vehicle equipment safety commission, an organization of state vehicle men who are close to the auto industry and receive hospitable entertainment at annual conventions.

Sen. Magnuson vigorously opposed state control. He argued the states should be consulted but that fixing safety standards must be the job of the federal government; he also argued that the secretary of commerce must be given a certain date for fixing safety standards; there could be no long delays.

RUSSELL LONG'S ROLL

Sen. Russell Long, who is new to the commerce committee, recalled that when he was in college he went driving with four of his friends in a convertible. They had nothing to drink, he emphasized. But a tire blew out and the car rolled over four times.

"We were able to walk away from that accident because that car's construction included a center post," said the senator from Louisiana. "Today if we had rolled over in one of the hardtop convertibles, we would have been killed. They look strong but don't have this center post."

Sen. Lausche got very excited about fins and hood ornaments. He said he was in favor of safety and he didn't think much of these "daggers and swords" on the outside of the car because he knew what they could do.

Sen. Cannon chimed in to say that he saw a little girl stabbed to death by a fin. When her tricycle rolled off the curb, the car fin went through her heart.

Sen. Mondale brought up his amendment to require the industry to notify purchasers of car defects -- not merely the dealers. Action on this was deferred.

Chairman Magnuson indicated that President Johnson wants a tough safety bill and the senator obviously agreed with him. He expressed the hope that the committee sessions would not drag out as long as the seven truth - in - packaging sessions. The next auto meeting is today (June 1).

Magnuson did not say so, but this is probably the most important public safety bill ever to be considered by his committee.

Note -- Gov. George Romney of Michigan will come to Washington Friday as a member of the Governor's Traffic Safety committee to call on the White House and the House and Senate Commerce committees to appeal for states rights for auto manufacturing standards. This will find Romney in an interesting position. He has talked a lot about safety standards but, as former head of American Motors, he always veers around to the industry position.

AUTO SAFETY

One overlooked factor in traffic safety is improper street lighting, says the ex-mayor of Louisville, Charles R. Farnsley, now a Democratic congressman from Kentucky.

"When I was first elected mayor of Louisville, I found that some of the lights had been turned off during World War II and never turned on again. So we doubled the amount of street lighting and reduced both accidents and crimes of violence.

"If our streets are adequately lighted, it will cut juvenile delinquency and crimes of violence in half and reduce auto accidents by a third."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Washington, D. C.: -- It will be "either airlines or guidelines," according to a leader of the big machinists' union which expects to strike the commercial flying business at the apogee of the jet season, July fourth to the sixth.

This chap was as blunt as he was witty. At least five major airlines will stay down, said he, unless the President's wage guidelines go up.

Strikes are not exactly "busting out all over" because it is June.

But the work stoppages come swifter now. Transportation paralysis on the land as in the air threatens, as labor leaders attempt to get their contracts in before some sort of war controls are rushed into effect.

It was frankly put by a federal official at an off-the-record briefing of foreign labor attaches in the Labor Dept. last Thursday (May 26). Our government briefs foreign service people here just as other capitals brief our embassy staffs abroad.

"The strike position in the U. S. today is a total of 233 strikes of which 42 are in construction," said the conciliation expert, Walter Maggiolo.

Then came an analysis of the stoppages.

One, in and around Chicago, started on April 11th by tying up one billion dollars' worth of construction, of which a hundred million was "in roads and highways."

But it is not the nature of the strikes which now really counts. It is the nature of the men who lead them.

These union chiefs are the militants.

Look where you will on the strike front, and you will find the men who have been making the mass headlines though most of these leaders are almost unknown to the public.

If one looks past the five airlines (Eastern, National, Northwest, TWA and United) threatened with a July 4th stoppage by the machinsts' tough national vice president, Joe Ramsey, the observer will find American Airlines and Pan American World Airways right on the sights of another union later this summer and fall.

Tackling these carriers is a team which had America hysterical earlier this year--the Transport Workers Union men who called the signals in the New York City transit stoppage.

This will be their first big test without the late Mike Quill's great sense of drama and strategy. Of course, the team is anxious to deliver to their men in this first test of leadership.

The team itself has the natural built-in rivalries and ambitions as well as talents. They are "Mike's" successors: President Guinan; and secretary-treasurer, the white - hot Douglas Mac Mahon (who stepped in when Quill and Guinan went to prison); and his not-so-silent partner of that turbulence, Jim Horst, now executive vice president and director of the union's Air Transport Division.

They're talking strike -- unless they get a 30 per cent wage increase, double and triple time for overtime and a reduction in the work week without loss of pay. Tens of thousands are involved on both lines.

It is the mood of the moment not merely to smash the 3.2 per cent wage guidelines but to grind them down under heavy percentages.

Understanding this will mean understanding the taut springs from which the summer headlines will pop. Just watch the railroads in a few weeks. The big railroad trainmen's union led by Charlie Luna, a man who in less than a decade will be in labor's high command, wants 25 per cent wage hike now and lots more in fringes. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers want a 30 to 33 1-3 per cent boost and some fancy fringes.

There is the rival Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen leader, H. E. Gilbert, who now says: More strikes will be necessary in the industry to get what we want. He pulled a surprise four-day stoppage last March against eight railroads.

If critical transport gets hung on the picket line, other industries will not be far behind. Unions everywhere, lining up for the grinding of the guidelines, are in everything from construction (this is the year of the carpenters) to cargo hauling, to longshoring to electronics in almost 1,000 plants and installations.

Mr. Johnson may have to make another "cool it" speech -- and this time not to the intellectuals.

He's now dealing with a tougher school.

ANOTHER G. I. INVESTMENT

THE NEW G. I. BILL in part is an investment in the younger generation. Many of its provisions went into effect the day the measure was enacted into law -- last March 3. Educational benefits become effective on June 1.

To a degree the new benefits correspond to those provided under earlier G. I. bills, the landmark programs enacted for veterans of World War II and the Korean War. The new law, formally known as the Veterans' Readjustment Benefits Act of 1966, differs in providing somewhat lower cash allowances for education and in stricter eligibility requirements.

A G. I. Bill of Rights for post-Korean veterans had been before Congress for a decade. Passage finally came in February in a whirlwind fashion, with unanimous votes in both houses. Some congressmen said the bill did not do enough.

THE NUMBER of veterans receiving education and training allowances in the first year under the new law will average 251,000 in any given month. This figure will rise to 413,000 by 1970.

The program covers veterans who served on active duty for a period of more than 180 days, any part of which was served after Jan. 31, 1955, and who were discharged or released under conditions other than dishonorable. Benefits will be calculated on the basis of one month of aid for each month, or fraction, of service on active duty.

Eligible veterans discharged before June 1 will have eight years -- until May 31, 1974 -- to complete their programs. Those discharged later may receive educational benefits within eight years from the date of their discharge.

Monthly allowances are designed to meet in part the expenses of the veteran's subsistence, tuition, fees, supplies, books, equipment, and other educational costs. Cold War veterans will find, as did Korean G. I.'s, that the allowances will have to be supplemented by wages, savings, scholarships, or outside assistance. Full-time students will receive cash benefits of $100 a month; with one dependent, $125; with two or more dependents, $150. Part-time students or trainees will receive less.

THE NEW B. I. BILL will cost $358 million in the first year, $245 million more than President Johnson had budgeted for the year beginning July 1. Nevertheless, the President said on March 3: "Because it is for education, I am going to sign this bill, even though it provides hundreds of millions of dollars more than I thought it advisable to recommend or to ask for this year."

Undoubtedly the escalation of the fighting in Viet Nam weighed heavily upon Congress to pass the bill. Some votes may have been affected by a feeling that the new measure compensates, indirectly and only in the future, for a draft system that allows exemption for college students.

But a higher argument is available. The nation spent $14 billion on education for World War II vets, and about $2.4 billion for Korean vets. The first measure was a serendipitous miracle, for it gave America the skilled men and women she urgently needed in the aftermath of war. And the Veterans Administration concludes that the first G. I. Bill alone is paying for itself at close to $1 billion a year -- in the additional income taxes paid by those educated veterans.

ALLEY OOP, ATTENTION!

Time machines have been a favorite device of writers from H. G. Wells to V. T. Hamlin, creator of "Alley Oop."

Now a mechanical engineer comes along to say the idea isn't so fictional after all, that engineers already have a time machine of sorts at their disposal.

It is not, alas, something you can climb into and zip back and forth through history in, using a calendar for a speedometer. It is simply an ordinary analogue computer.

Computer operators already "travel" through time quite routinely, says Prof. Joseph E. Shigley of the University of Michigan. They begin a problem with time equal to zero (the present) but speed up the computations of the events they are investigating so that they take place faster than normally. Thus they are, in effect, looking into the future.

But apparently everyone has overlooked the fact that an analogue computer can also make time run backwards, says the professor.

Eureka! he cries. All an operator has to do is set up his program in the usual way as though he were going to operate with normal time flow -- that is, from present to future. Then he just places an inverter -- a simple electronic gismo that converts signals from positive to negative -- at the output of every integrator in the computer circuit. His time events will then run in reverse.

All kinds of interesting situations can then be analyzed, notes Shigley. "An automotive or aircraft collision is a typical investigative problem. One begins with the accident and solves the problem backwards in time to learn why it happened."

EXIT POUND, ENTER DOLLAR

The sun continues to set on the British currency system, with its inscrutable array of pence, shillings, crowns, and guineas. Australia, Sierra Leone and South Africa are only a few of the few British dependencies which have switched to decimal currency in recent years. The Bahamas, still very much a colony, will follow suit on Wednesday, May 25.

Because of its large tourist trade, the Bahamas has long operated on a dual currency of pounds and shillings for residents, dollars and cents for American visitors. This system probably will remain in effect. It would not be surprising, though, if Americans chose to use the attractively designed Bahamian dollars instead of their own.

The Bahamian five-dollar piece is the biggest silver coin -- both in dimension and denomination -- ever issued in the Western Hemisphere. Composed of 92.5 per cent fine silver, the five dollar cartwheel measures nearly one and three-quarters inches in diameter. The two-dollar, one-dollar and 5-cent coins also are silver. The remaining coins, predominantly of nickel or copper, are in denominations of 1,5,10, 15 and 25 cents. All are round except the 10-cent piece, which has a scalloped edge, and the 15-cent piece, which is square.

The days of the 20-shilling pound are clearly numbered. New Zealand plans to adopt the decimal system in 1967. And it is only a matter of time before Great Britain itself bows to the inevitable. A Committee of Inquiry on Decimal Currency recommended three years ago that the pound retain its present value and appearance but that it be divided into 100 cents. For psychological as well as technical reasons, the changeover in Britain may be more leisurely than elsewhere.

TEXAS -- ALL MINK AND A YARD WIDE

If you get a certain letter this week from Neiman-Marcus Company, which owns that Dallas department store, you can count yourself among 1,500 of the "wealthiest people in the world." The letter is a tender of the "finest mink coast in the world." It will sell for about $80,000, special order.

The Dallas store early in May bought 40 skins of the new Black Willow mink for $1,100 each, or $44,000, from the Hudson's Bay Fur Company at auction. According to the N. Y. Herald Tribune (May 7, 1966) Stanley Marcus, president of the store, "whistled when he heard the price, wished Mr. (George J.) Liebes (the buyer) luck, but came to New York (the next day) . . . just to see the skins."

Expensive coats are nothing new for NM. Some years ago it whipped up -- and sold -- a Sapphire or Cerulean mink at $40,000. For sable, poker goes up. The store has already hit the $80,000 neighborhood, which is a very nice neighborhood indeed, with sable.

The prospective buyers for the 80-grand mink job will be culled from the store's famous Christmas catalogue mailing list. This is the deal which offered several years ago a confidential shopping service for "customers who find themselves in the position of sending gifts to those in high position -- kings, shahs, maharajahs, prime ministers, and other dignitaries." Billing was to be by telephone only, and the nature of the gifts was to be divulged "only on a court subpeona."

Last year NM offered its clientele, among other things, a three-litre flacon of Shalimar perfume at a quick $2,500. But the vintage year for Neiman-Marcus was probably 1959, when the store offered its select list a gift-wrapped Black Angus steer, with roast beef serving cart, for $1,925.

Which isn't a bad idea.

We have no idea what the movie is about, but its title could be a spur to the credit card economy.

Why not be able to rent a girl? And on credit.

It might help your career if you could.

That's because so many of the giant corporations are becoming more and more interested in the lives of their executives. They're no longer content to know all they can just about the man, they also want to know all about his wife.

And, often, the man might miss a coveted push up the executive ladder because, even though he meets all the firm's requirements, his wife doesn't.

Suppose you've got the kind of wife who likes to stay home nights and read the collected works of Shakespeare rather than going out on the town. This is fine in its fashion. But suppose you've also got a boss who's a swinger, a real drink-it-up, laugh-it-up until five o'clock in the morning kind of guy. He also is the guy who decides whether you get the promotion. And he decides he wants to meet your wife over dinner and drinks before making a decision about you.

What do you do? You know your wife will hate him, and he'll hate her. Don't panic. Just call your friendly "rent-a-wife" dealer. He'll put the proper wife in the party seat. Show him your credit card it might be expensive but you've got 30 days to pay and he'll run your request through a computer. In less than a minute it will pick out just the right woman to impress your boss- a fast-drinking, quick-laughing, redhead who can show your leader how to Watusi without giving him a heart attack.

You can pick up your "wife" yourself or she can be delivered, and in plenty of time for you to fill her in on what the boss expects in the wife of a rising junior executive.

The nicest thing is that when the evening is done and the sun is coming up you just return your rented wife to the store and drive on home to your real one.

No muss, no fuss, no bother.

Law, like freedom is indivisible. No part of it can be brought into public disrespect without all obedience to law suffering as a result. If a man may break a trespass law or a draft law because he personally disapproves of it, then he may rob and loot and rape and kill as well. He can count on finding many to defend him because of vague "pressures from society" which they say he is rebelling against.

The breakdown of the rule of law which began when distinguished Americans endorsed illegal demonstrations and trespassing led to the carnival of crime and destruction in Watts last August.

Now many Americans are taking a second look at the doctrine of "civil disobedience," and some who previously championed it are coming out in opposition. We may take heart from this rediscovery of reason. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Having made such a botch of their case in public senate hearings on auto safety, auto executives are now trying to do a better job in the closed - door sessions of the Senate Commerce committee.

This is where senators whip together the safety law which the auto industry will have to obey. Auto executives were not permitted inside the hearings. However, this column can report what happened last week, namely, that the industry has won over three key senators, all Democrats, who served in effect as auto spokesmen inside the closed - door sessions. They were:

Howard Cannon, Nevada, heretofore a tough advocate of auto safety, but who has been won over by his friend, Louis Spits, also of Nevada, chairman of the vehicle equipment safety commission, which is industry dominated.

Phil Hart of Detroit, a great champion of the consumer when it comes to truth - in - packaging, but now a genteel spokesman for Michigan's No. 1 industry -- automobiles.

Chief defenders of the public inside the closed - door hearing were Chairman Warren Magnuson, Wash., Maurine Neuberger, Ore., Russell Long, La., all Democrats, with Norris cotton, N. H., Republican.

SKILLED AUTO LOBBYISTS

Working frantically but skillfully on the outside were auto industry attorney Lloyd Cutter and Rodney Markley, Ford public relations man, who went from congressional office to office, endeavoring to soften the committee's proposal that auto companies which make dangerous or faulty cars be held criminally responsible.

Cutler and Markley indicated this was an insult to the auto industry, wanted no criminal liability at all. They called on almost every member of the Senate and House Commerce committees, plus Sens. Bobby Kennedy, D- N. Y., Abe Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Walter Mondale, D-Minn., who are not on the commerce committee.

Chief argument of the auto industry senators in the closed-door session was states rights. They argued that standards for building safer cars should be left to the vehicle equipment safety commission, an organization of state vehicle men who are close to the auto industry and receive hospitable entertainment at annual conventions.

Sen. Magnuson vigorously opposed state control. He argued the states should be consulted but that fixing safety standards must be the job of the federal government; he also argued that the secretary of commerce must be given a certain date for fixing safety standards; there could be no long delays.

RUSSELL LONG'S ROLL

Sen. Russell Long, who is new to the commerce committee, recalled that when he was in college he went driving with four of his friends in a convertible. They had nothing to drink, he emphasized. But a tire blew out and the car rolled over four times.

"We were able to walk away from that accident because that car's construction included a center post," said the senator from Louisiana. "Today if we had rolled over in one of the hardtop convertibles, we would have been killed. They look strong but don't have this center post."

Sen. Lausche got very excited about fins and hood ornaments. He said he was in favor of safety and he didn't think much of these "daggers and swords" on the outside of the car because he knew what they could do.

Sen. Cannon chimed in to say that he saw a little girl stabbed to death by a fin. When her tricycle rolled off the curb, the car fin went through her heart.

Sen. Mondale brought up his amendment to require the industry to notify purchasers of car defects -- not merely the dealers. Action on this was deferred.

Chairman Magnuson indicated that President Johnson wants a tough safety bill and the senator obviously agreed with him. He expressed the hope that the committee sessions would not drag out as long as the seven truth - in - packaging sessions. The next auto meeting is today (June 1).

Magnuson did not say so, but this is probably the most important public safety bill ever to be considered by his committee.

Note -- Gov. George Romney of Michigan will come to Washington Friday as a member of the Governor's Traffic Safety committee to call on the White House and the House and Senate Commerce committees to appeal for states rights for auto manufacturing standards. This will find Romney in an interesting position. He has talked a lot about safety standards but, as former head of American Motors, he always veers around to the industry position.

AUTO SAFETY

One overlooked factor in traffic safety is improper street lighting, says the ex-mayor of Louisville, Charles R. Farnsley, now a Democratic congressman from Kentucky.

"When I was first elected mayor of Louisville, I found that some of the lights had been turned off during World War II and never turned on again. So we doubled the amount of street lighting and reduced both accidents and crimes of violence.

"If our streets are adequately lighted, it will cut juvenile delinquency and crimes of violence in half and reduce auto accidents by a third."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Washington, D. C.: -- It will be "either airlines or guidelines," according to a leader of the big machinists' union which expects to strike the commercial flying business at the apogee of the jet season, July fourth to the sixth.

This chap was as blunt as he was witty. At least five major airlines will stay down, said he, unless the President's wage guidelines go up.

Strikes are not exactly "busting out all over" because it is June.

But the work stoppages come swifter now. Transportation paralysis on the land as in the air threatens, as labor leaders attempt to get their contracts in before some sort of war controls are rushed into effect.

It was frankly put by a federal official at an off-the-record briefing of foreign labor attaches in the Labor Dept. last Thursday (May 26). Our government briefs foreign service people here just as other capitals brief our embassy staffs abroad.

"The strike position in the U. S. today is a total of 233 strikes of which 42 are in construction," said the conciliation expert, Walter Maggiolo.

Then came an analysis of the stoppages.

One, in and around Chicago, started on April 11th by tying up one billion dollars' worth of construction, of which a hundred million was "in roads and highways."

But it is not the nature of the strikes which now really counts. It is the nature of the men who lead them.

These union chiefs are the militants.

Look where you will on the strike front, and you will find the men who have been making the mass headlines though most of these leaders are almost unknown to the public.

If one looks past the five airlines (Eastern, National, Northwest, TWA and United) threatened with a July 4th stoppage by the machinsts' tough national vice president, Joe Ramsey, the observer will find American Airlines and Pan American World Airways right on the sights of another union later this summer and fall.

Tackling these carriers is a team which had America hysterical earlier this year--the Transport Workers Union men who called the signals in the New York City transit stoppage.

This will be their first big test without the late Mike Quill's great sense of drama and strategy. Of course, the team is anxious to deliver to their men in this first test of leadership.

The team itself has the natural built-in rivalries and ambitions as well as talents. They are "Mike's" successors: President Guinan; and secretary-treasurer, the white - hot Douglas Mac Mahon (who stepped in when Quill and Guinan went to prison); and his not-so-silent partner of that turbulence, Jim Horst, now executive vice president and director of the union's Air Transport Division.

They're talking strike -- unless they get a 30 per cent wage increase, double and triple time for overtime and a reduction in the work week without loss of pay. Tens of thousands are involved on both lines.

It is the mood of the moment not merely to smash the 3.2 per cent wage guidelines but to grind them down under heavy percentages.

Understanding this will mean understanding the taut springs from which the summer headlines will pop. Just watch the railroads in a few weeks. The big railroad trainmen's union led by Charlie Luna, a man who in less than a decade will be in labor's high command, wants 25 per cent wage hike now and lots more in fringes. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers want a 30 to 33 1-3 per cent boost and some fancy fringes.

There is the rival Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen leader, H. E. Gilbert, who now says: More strikes will be necessary in the industry to get what we want. He pulled a surprise four-day stoppage last March against eight railroads.

If critical transport gets hung on the picket line, other industries will not be far behind. Unions everywhere, lining up for the grinding of the guidelines, are in everything from construction (this is the year of the carpenters) to cargo hauling, to longshoring to electronics in almost 1,000 plants and installations.

Mr. Johnson may have to make another "cool it" speech -- and this time not to the intellectuals.

He's now dealing with a tougher school.

By BEN BROWN
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS AP -- "We're finally getting the breaks," says manager Red Schoendienst of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Redbirds won their fourth straight game and 12th in the last 19 starts Tuesday night, whipping Houston 3-0, behind the five- hit pitching of Ray Washburn and Hal Woodeshick.

"We're getting good pitching and Orlando Cepeda is doing a great job for us," the Cardinal manager continued, delighted that in the last four games the Cardinals have allowed only four runs.

"Cepeda's big bat in the middle of the lineup has given us a big boost," Schoendienst said. Since joining the Cards May 8 in the trade that sent Pitcher Ray Sadecki to the Giants, Cepeda has hit at a .362 clip.

Tuesday night, the Redbirds rallied for their three runs after two were out in the fifth inning.

Back - to - back singles by Lou Brock, Bobby Tolan and Curt Flood were the big blows.

Flood's single to short centerfield fell between several onrushing Houston players and the speedy Tolan scored from first on the play.

Houston played the game under protest after the fifth inning. Manager Grady Hatton protested when home plate Umpire Mel Steiner ejected catcher John Bateman for objecting to a called third strike.

Steiner threw Bateman out of the game for remarks he made from the dugout. "Bateman did not say a word from the bench," Hatton said.

St. Louis will host Los Angeles and Sandy Koufax tonight. Al Jackson will start for the Cards.

RX: TENNIS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. ap - A game of tennis two or three a week is Dr. W. F. Widen's own prescription for keeping fit at the age of 70.

The physician has participated in the sport since 1913 and plans to continue, though he gave up tournament play when his wife became invalided a few years ago. Winner of many trophies, including a couple of national championships, he feels tennis is the perfect lifetime sport. "It's a sport any able-bodied adult can play without sparing too much time from his profession or business," he explains. As a physician, he labels tennis "just great."

In the 30 years between 1930 and 1960, there were 3,666 persons legally executed in the United State.

Figures Show That Cost of Week's Shopping Up 7 Per Cent

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A housewives' budget brigade concluded today that government price indexes fairly reflect a hard fact of life in the 1960s: it is costing more and more to feed the family.

If you're a housewife, what's bothering you most today?

In fact, many housewives seem convinced that food prices have just about doubled in the past years.

Well, that hasn't quite happened -- not according to the figures of an unusual independent food price survey by The Associated Press.

The AP survey concentrated on 12 major cities where the government also publishes a price breakdown on a large list of food items. AP's budget brigade of sharp-eyed housewives went through their check in much the same manner as do the government checkers.

You'll find their report most interesting. The article shows you what has happened to food prices over the past year, where and how budgeting is easiest, what the AP housewife brigade thinks of it all, and many other intriguing market basket details.

St. Louis was one of the 12 cities where AP housewife budget brigades made shopping price surveys on March 10. Want to know where your food money goes? This shows the budget brigade's findings along with results of the government price survey made at about the same time.

Many housewives seem firmly convinced that food prices just about doubled in the past year. They didn't, but government figures, supported by an independent Associated Press survey in March, show that the cost of a typical week's shopping went up nearly 7 per cent.

Meats, however, have risen sharply. Based on the government's national price averages, it cost $6.22 to buy one pound each of sirloin steak, hamburger, pork chops, ham, bacon and lamb chops in mid-March, compared with $5.12 in mid-March, of 1965 -- a rise of 21.5 per cent.

By contrast, the other items on the shopping list of the AP's budget brigade rose only 1.5 per cent.

The AP's budget brigade figures, and the government's, should enable skeptical shoppers to judge for themselves.

They said food prices over-all were unquestionably high, although many a penny could be shaved off the grocery bill by determined bargain-hunting from store to store. Some made the point that few housewives can spare so much time from their other home-making duties.

If a housewife does all her shopping at one store, the researcher in St. Louis said, "It doesn't matter much which store you shop at -- they'll get all your money anyway."

"Each store's weekly bargains really were bargains," she reported. "They cut off as much as 20 or 30 cents per item. But they seem to make it up somewhere else."

The Associated Press budget brigade priced a list of 38 to 40 foot items, from potatoes to sirloin steak, in three supermarkets in each of the 12 cities on March 10.

The results were set alongside returns from U.S. Department of Labor checkers who shopped a wider range of stores in the same cities at approximately the same time. The stores in 50 smaller cities for which no price breakdown is published.

In the 12 cities where the AP paralleled the government survey, average total bills were remarkably similar and in the case of St. Louis came out at precisely the same figure--$20.43.

The government goes about its monthly price-gathering in a cooly scientific way, using 125 checkers working under field supervisors and supported by computers at home base. The AP survey was a matronly affair on a much smaller scale but following in the footsteps of the government checkers.

Food prices make up only 22.5 per cent of the government's over-all cost of living index, which during the March-to-March period rose 2.5 per cent. However, it is food prices which the housewife encounters face to face every week and is most aware of.

Both AP and government checkers reported Cleveland to be the cheapest city for the over-all food bill. Government checkers came up with a figure of $19.67 for 39 items, and the AP housewife found the same items for $18.77.

Government checkers found San Francisco to be the costliest city, with an average price of $21.27 for 39 items compared with $19.70 reported by the AP checker. Costliest city in the AP survey was Boston, with a total of $21.06 compared with the government finding of $21.10.

In between the extremes came Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Washington, D.C.

My budget is strained to the breaking point," commented the Cleveland housewife.

The housewife in Washington complained that "some basic items of diet have increased over the past year with no publicity -- bread up 4 cents, milk up 4 cents, rice up 4 cents, potatoes up 15 to 25 cents for 10 pounds."

Said the Chicagoan: "The manager of a store I checked said he had 600 'voids' in the past week. A 'void' is where a customer finds he doesn't have enough money to pay for everything in his basket."

"All prices have skyrocketed but meat is extremely high," said the Pittsburgh reporter.

The Baltimore surveyor said "an employe of one of the supermarkets included in my canvass claimed he is spending more time changing the shelf prices of goods than stocking the shelves themselves."

"The average housewife finds herself buying a lower quality item to keep her budget balanced," said the Detroiter. "I watch pennies closer than ever before."

The AP budget brigade turned up a wide spread in prices for individual items from store to store in the same city. But by the time they had priced all the items on the list, the total tended to be about the same.

In Baltimore, for example, one store had an 89-cent special on sirloin steak while a second store charged $1.19. Nevertheless the checker's total bill was $20.57 in the first store, $20.59 in the other.

Reports by both sets of checkers indicated that pork prices, which had been in orbit for months, were beginning to level out or decline, although still far higher than a year ago.

Government checkers reported an average price of $1.11.7 for pork chops in in February and 93.2 cents in March 1965, $1.09.5 in Boston compared with $1.12.1 and 85.1 cents.

AP's budget brigade found their three-store average price for pork chops to be $1.17.7 in Baltimore, $1.11.7 in Boston, $1.11.3 in Cleveland and 99 cents in Detroit.

The tendency for food prices in general to level out was reflected in April statistics announced by the government a week ago showing that over-all food costs rose only .1 of 1 per cent over the March averages.

The AP budget brigade in general agreed that there are several ways to resist advancing prices. These include buying only the items on a prepared list, placing a limit on the total to be spent, eliminating luxuries and buying less expensive grades.

The AP-s Detroit checker said advances in the processing of foods often beguile the shopper into spending more than she intended.

"Before, it was canned peas, now it's frozen peas with miniature onions or in mushroom sauce," she said. "Corn once came packed in water. Now it is frozen in pure butter."

The Cleveland member of the team remarked that "so complete and elegant an array of prepared foods now is on the market that I begin to suspect the cook may be done away with."

The budget brigade said shopping in several stores saves money, but may prolong the chore of buying the groceries beyond that which a busy housewife can spare.

The Philadelphia checker said: "I find it necessary to shopping all three stores to take advantage of their loss leaders and determine which stores have the better values."

The brigade's San Francisco housewife said she was surprised to find that "a market well known for its 'low prices' charged more for meat than another market considered high-priced for meat. This latter market was considerably lower in prices and its meat was superior."

An analysis of the returns from the AP's survey showed that a housewife with unlimited time for shopping could have saved a substantial sum by ferreting out the lowest price for a given item at each of the three stores visited.

Thus the shopper in the Washington area ran up a bill averaging $20 for the 40 items priced. By switching from store to store she could have had them for $18.67.

The shopping list of the AP budget brigade included staple meats, fish and poultry, fruits, vegetables, canned goods, coffee, tea, sugar, eggs, butter, margarine, cheese, cereal and cold cuts.

The total bill by cities government figure first follows: Baltimore, $20.80 and $20.83; Boston, $32.10 and $21.06; Chicago $20.52 and $19.68; Cleveland, $19.67 and $18.77; Detroit, $19.82 and $19.53; Los Angeles, $20.38 and $19.02; New York, $20.68 and $20.10; Philadelphia, $20.42 and $19.89; San Francisco, $21.27 and $19.70; Pittsburgh, $20.48 and $21.03; St. Louis, $20.43 and $20.43 same; Washington, $20.98 and $20.

Figures Show That Cost of Week's Shopping Up 7 Per Cent

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A housewives' budget brigade concluded today that government price indexes fairly reflect a hard fact of life in the 1960s: it is costing more and more to feed the family.

If you're a housewife, what's bothering you most today?

In fact, many housewives seem convinced that food prices have just about doubled in the past years.

Well, that hasn't quite happened -- not according to the figures of an unusual independent food price survey by The Associated Press.

The AP survey concentrated on 12 major cities where the government also publishes a price breakdown on a large list of food items. AP's budget brigade of sharp-eyed housewives went through their check in much the same manner as do the government checkers.

You'll find their report most interesting. The article shows you what has happened to food prices over the past year, where and how budgeting is easiest, what the AP housewife brigade thinks of it all, and many other intriguing market basket details.

"The biggest event we have ever held in our 47 year history," stated Sam Graber, President of Grabers in announcing the department stores 47th Anniversary Sale.

Starting June 1st, the company will be celebrating their 47th year in business that saw it grow from a small store in Sikeston, Missouri to one of the largest group of stores based in the mid-south. Today, there are 28 Graber stores in Missouri, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas.

Milton Bernstein is manager of the local Graber store. In discussing this sale he stated that he has never before seen so great a preparation and planning for an event since he has been with the company.

"This is the Big Sale." Everything about it is big. Big in selection, big in savings with the lowest prices of the season, big in quality because this is our regular merchandise at sale prices." Bernstein said. "We have actually been planning this Anniversary Sale for 5 months with our buyers making many trips to the New York markets to work with our manufacturers."

Joel Montgomery -- Is He Kidding?

It appears here that Joel A. Montgomery, the Sikeston millionaire who has been in the news of late, just may be trying to pull someone's political leg.

The story out of Memphis, Tenn., this past weekend quotes Mr. Montgomery as saying he is going to run for governor or United States senator in 1968.

There happens to be a couple of other persons who are also interested in those jobs, namely the incumbents, Governor Hearnes and Senator Long. And whether you agree with their political philosophies, both are incumbents and history says incumbents are hard to beat -- not unbeatable but certainly rough to unseat barring some sort of scandal.

Joel Montgomery is no dummy when it comes to finances, as his rise to fame and fortune in Southeast Missouri has shown.

He has also toyed with local and state-wide politics and is not in the so-called beginner's class. That's why it's hard to understand why the man made the statements he did following his trial in Memphis.

UNDER STRAIN

Undoubtedly, Mr. Montgomery has been under a terrible strain these past years. First he fought extradition after former Gov. Dalton refused to extradite him for an auto death in which he was a passenger, not the driver, of a car owned by him. He became embroiled in the 1964 Democratic primary campaign when he supported Governor Hearnes' rival, Hilary Bush, who was the loser. That he should have kept his fingers out of that one, no one knows better than Joel Montgomery.

His friends charged there were political overtones to the whole matter, which Mr. Hearnes claims is nonsense. Now Mr. Montgomery has won his case, with a jury saying "not guilty," and undoubtedly a great burden has been lifted from his shoulders. Maybe he got carried away, but then again Mr. Montgomery can be a very determined man.

RAGS TO RICHES

The rags to riches story of the boy who grew up on the wrong side of the tracks in Sikeston and is now one of its most wealthy and influential citizens is well known in southeast Missouri.

It's been a couple of months now since Joel Montgomery mentioned that he "wouldn't mind seeking a public office." Here is a man who has conquered and is looking for more fields to conquer.

I was convinced at that time that Mr. Montgomery was putting out a political feeler and two months later it looks as though he is still trying to test the climate. Contrary to reports out of Memphis following his trial which termed him "politically ambitious," Mr. Montgomery is ambitious, period.

At this time though, it appears Mr. Montgomery is still talking with tongue in cheek. If given some assurances in the right places in the state, he could definitely decide to bundle a wad of his earnings together and seek the governorship, which seems more logical than the senate seat of Edward V. Long. That's because, many of Senator Long's friends are friends of Mr. Montgomery and members of the so-called "Establishment" faction of the Democratic party.

If Mr. Montgomery is serious, he'll have to make a few trips here and to Kansas City to talk to party leaders. And he has enough experience to know that two years (1968) is a short time in politics, which means the time for action is now -- to repeat, if he's serious.

Then and only then will politicians take him as being in earnest. But if Mr. Montgomery isn't kidding, it'll be a whirlwind campaign if he runs it the way he does his business enterprises.

MODERN PROBLEMS

BERKELEY, Calif. AP - In pointing out to the city council why it needs more officers, the Berkeley police department cited such new problems as the recent thefts of two motorized skateboards.

Paschall Is President of Baptists

DETROIT - The City of Detroit has had its 15,000 Baptist visitors here for the 109th session of the Southern Baptist Convention. The city officials have gone all out to make the convention feel at home with signs and banners all over the downtown areas. The riverfront has been rebuilt with beautiful Cobo Hall and Stadium and Edsel Ford auditorium as the main focal point overlooking the parks with the Windsor, Canada, skyline across the Detroit River.

Wednesday sessions opened with the Sanford University choirs singing. Thursday night's session, Foreign Mission night, heard the Southwest Baptist College Choir of Bolivar.

Messages were brought by several Baptist leaders including Warren Hultgren of Tulsa, Okla., Douglas Hudgins of Jackson, Miss. The Rev. Frank Paschall of the First Baptist church of Nashville, Tenn., spoke. Later it was announced that he had been chosen president of the 11,000,000 members of the Southern Baptist Convention. Evangelistic singers brought messages in song.

Thursday night was Foreign Mission night and several hundred new pastors and their wives came to the stage as they've been appointed to serve on the mission field in some part of the world.

The Rev. James W. Hackney and Mrs. Hackney of Sikeston, Mo. visited with hundreds of friends from college and seminary days in New Orleans Baptist Seminary. The other messengers of Sikeston, Mo., Lenzie and Geneva Beck, Charles and Carlene Johnson, David Hackney, Carol Hackney, and John W. Davis visited with several Baptist friends. They saw and visited the former Superintendent of Missions and associate pastor at the First Baptist Church of Sikeston, Paul Higgins and his group of seven messengers from the Sagamon Association of Decatur, Ill.

The convention adopted a budget of 26 million dollars.

CAUGHT BY FILM

COFFEE CORNER by Cherie

"Tadpoles and snails and puppy dog tails, thats what little boys are made of ", and I've discovered, sometimes to my utter horror, quite a number of other things besides. I'm positive about that tadpole bit, having recently knocked over an innocent looking jar of dirty water, only to find myself and everything about and around me covered with little black squirmy, nasty, dirty, Ugh-Ugh-Ugh, frogs to be. Today I walked into the boy's bathroom and sitting in various points of prominence were three more jars---one filled with sweat bees, another with a lone bumble bee, and heaven knows what that was that was wiggling around in the other container!!! Needless to say, I decided I'd clean in there another day and I beat a hasty retreat. Girls collect dolls --- but boys? Only the other day I just knew my washing machine had blown a gasket from the amount of banging and clanging that was going on, but no, I'd just missed cleaning out one of Lee's pockets (a job I don't relish, as I am very hesitant about sticking my hand in where I can't see), and bouncing around in the washer was one large rock, several assorted soda bottle caps, fifteen or twenty saturated and in minute pieces (Lee just now walked in and asked me for another jar, I don't think I can stand it!) bubble gum wrappers and a coiled piece of wire. I just don't stand a chance! Despite my protests, he just found a jar, wonder what addition to the family we're going to have now, with my luck all these bugs are probably male too.

Well, that does it, no new bugs, just one less jar, broken all over the patio. I don't see how mothers ever get anything accomplished with all the million and one little crisis that crop up each and every day, along with the washing, cleaning, ironing, cooking, changing beds, changing clothes (at least four or five times a day, and I don't mean mine), etc., and then Charles has the gall to come in at dinnertime and say, "What have you been doing all day, just sitting around?" By then, I'm usually prone on the sofa having one of those migranes the t.v. commericals tell you about, and if I weren't so weak, I'd belt him, as it it, I just close my eyes and think bad thoughts, and even that requires more energy than I've got left.

Well, I've just cleaned up the slivers from the jar and whopped two bottoms, so in the fifteen minutes leeway, before another mishap, that I usually get after a good whop, I guess I'll stir up a little something for Cherie's Boys. No! I'm not either, they don't deserve it today, instead I'm going to stir up a little something for Cherie. This is the best Daiquiri in the world, and if there are any broken jars around your house, have one before you start sweeping up the pieces -- its great for the morale.

1/2 ounce of lime juice
1 ounce orange juice (that's the secret)
1 1/2 ounce light rum
1 tsp. of fine sugar or 1/2 ounce sugar syrup.

Mix in blendor with cup of crushed ice for 10 seconds; or shake with ice and serve on the rocks. Wheeee--Bring on the bugs -- I'm ready!!

PAINTING DELAYED

SOUTH PASADENA, Calif., - Eight housepainters were swishing paint on the side wall of a house here when a driverless pickup truck crashed down a hill, hit the wall and knocked it down. None of the painters was hurt, but the wall damage was extensive.

Thomas Havanis, owner of the truck, said he saw it begin to roll but couldn't get to it in time to stop it.

EASY SOLUTION

NORTH HALEDON, N.Y. - After driving for more than 50 years, Charles Wildeboer, 81, pressed his lips to his driver's license, kissed it goodby and placed it on the judge's bench. He had been arrested and was in court on a careless driving charge. He told the judge: "I think it is time to give up the license."

Lucy tells off Charlie Brown during heat of a tense contest.

Charlie Brown Does It Again For TV--Loses

Charlie Brown preserves his perfect pitching record with 999 straight losses and faces the greatest crisis in his ill-fated baseball career in "Charlie Brown's All-Stars," color cartoon Special to be broadcast WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8 (8:30-9:00 p.m., EDT), on the CBS Television Network.

It is the second in a series of Charlie Brown Specials featuring the popular "Peanuts" comic strip characters and written by their creator, Charles Schulz. The first program, "A Charlie Brown Christmas," received a Peabody Award and was twice honored by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

When Charlie winds up his 999th game in a blaze of failure, the rest of the "Peanuts" gang, including Lucy, Linus, Schroeder, Frieda and Snoopy the interpid shortstop, are thoroughly disgusted and decide to quit baseball forever. They take off on a variety of springtime pursuits -- Snoopy goes surfing, Lucy and the girls take up skate - boarding -- leaving poor old Charlie Brown out in left field, alone and despondent.

Suddenly a local merchant offers to outfit the group in official uniforms and Charlie sees his chance to save the team. He persuades the All-Stars to return to his diamond for one more game. It is Charlie's finest hour -- almost.

Master jazz musician Vince Guaraldi, Grammy Award winner who composed and performed the original score for "A Charlie Brown Christmas," has created the musical backgrounds for "Charlie Brown's All - Stars."

Report From Washington

Paul C. Jones

By a vote of 303-93, the House of Representatives has passed and sent to the Senate H. R. 13712, to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act, more commonly known as the Wage - Hour law, after three days of consideration.

Since this Representative was one of the 93 who voted against this bill, I would like to take this opportunity of pointing out certain provisions of the bill which caused me to vote as I did. First, let me say I was not so much opposed to the increase in the minimum wage, as I was apprehensive of the extended coverage, which in my opinion goes too far, particularly as it relates to coverage and overtime provisions for so-called agricultural workers, though without question, the percentage increases in the minimum wage can have none other than an inflationary effect which in many instances will wipe out the increase in hourly rates. For those already covered, the minimum wage on February 1, 1967, will go from $1.25 an hour to $1.40 an hour, and then two years later will advance to $1.60 an hour. I stated on the floor that a more reasonable and logical increase would have been $1.35 an hour on February 1, 1967; $1.45 an hour a year later and a $1.60 two years later. This would have meant an 8 per cent increase the first step (more than twice that provided by the President's suggested guide lines), rather than the 15 per cent provided in the bill.

Tha radical increase in coverage by lowering the volume of business test from one million dollars a year to $250,000 a year, will have the effect of placing under coverage thousands of employees of small business, including both retail, service and manufacturing establishments, many of which in my opinion will be forced out of business, particularly those small independent retail establishments, which in the past have received preferential treatment over the chain store operation. Many of these businesses have been hiring many inexperienced and sub-standard employees, who in all likelihood will also be forced out of employment, since the employer when he has to pay the minimum of $1.40 and $1.60 an hour will confine his employment to the more efficient and more productive employees.

The same situation prevails in the field of agriculture and agricultural processing, where many of those who have been employed in the past will find it more difficult, if not impossible to find employment at the higher rates. Particularly will this be true among the unskilled and the handicapped workers, who I believe will eventually land on the relief rolls. When legislation is written by individuals who are not familiar with farm operations, and the handling and processing of agricultural commodities, they cannot have an understanding of some of the problems which will arise. Take, for instance, the case of the sharecropper, who has contract to share 50-50 with the landowner, who shares in the expense of producing a crop by furnishing seed, fertilizer, etc., and they both share in the crop on an equal basis in "boom" and "bust" times. There was no assurance given, that in the case where the landowner exercises any control in what is planted, methods of cultivation, and times of harvest and marketing, that at the end of the year when production yields are down; where weather or other hazards have reduced the income to a point where the sharecropper can show that his portion of the crop does not equal an amount, derived from computing the hours he contributed by the minimum wage, then he could conceivably have a claim against his Landlord to make up the difference between the value of his half of the crop, and the minimum wage he would be entitled to based upon the hours he said he worked. Certainly, it is ridiculous to imagine a landowner being able to keep track of the hours contributed by the sharecropper. It is hoped, of course, that situations such as this can be clarified when the bill is considered in the Senate.

Farmers who would be exempt from the law are those who do not in any three-months period use more than 500 man-hours of hired help, and it will be a very small farmer, who during a harvest period can hold his hired help to less than 500 man - hours during any three month period. Most of us can imagine the helpless feeling which will be experienced by many of these small farmers when they are called upon to keep the records which will be required by the Department of Labor which has never been known to be very sympathetic with the farm problem.

An effort was made to eliminate some of these problems by giving more realistic consideration to the farm segment which in my opinion is going to be drastically affected by this bill, but with so few representatives from agricultural areas, and with the urban members having no conception of the problems which will be encountered, we were outvoted in every attempt. All I can say is, that unless the Senate recognizes some of the problems which were not apparent to the majority of the members of the House, we are in for a more accelerated inflation, and much confusion, particularly among those farmers and processors, small business operators who will be covered for the first time, and by operators of hospitals, nursing homes and similar institutions whose rates must of necessity be increased materially.

Washington Report

Sen. Stuart Symington

A SUBCONTRACT FOR APPROXIMATELY $1 MILLION with a potential of another $2 million has been awarded to the North American Aviation Rockeydyne - Neosho Plant by the AVCO Corporation of Stratford, Connecticut. The contract is for production of engine parts for the type of turbine engine used in the Chinook Army Transport helicopter which is employed in limited warfare such as military operations in Viet Nam.

When I was in Viet Nam the first of this year, helicopters were everywhere in evidence. Within the 1st Cavalry, for example, there were 1,700 helicopter takeoffs and landings per day. Accident rate was very low and compared favorably to that experienced in training at Fort Benning. The Chinook was being used not only in lifting men and supplies, but also 105 mm. artillery.

The helicopter is truly a workhorse for the modern army. Missouri can be proud that some of the production work will be done at the Neosho plant.

This past week I joined more than 20 other Senators in cosponsoring a measure introduced by Senators Ross Bass and John Sherman Cooper to provide additional sources of capital funds to supplement and eventually replace the present REA government loan programs.

The bill would create a Federal Electric Bank and a Federal Telephone Bank, which would be similar to the credit institutions of the Farm Credit Administration.

Secretary of Commerce John T. Connor has increased the licensed export quotas for whole cattle hides from 9,920,000 to 11,220,000 and for other cattle hides from 810,000 to 1,000,000 prices. Increases in quotas were also authorized for other skins and leathers. Country quotas for cattle hides were abolished.

The Secretary said the recent hearings showed a substantial shortage of cattle hides and an abnormal foreign demand for them. Therefore he found the export controls should be continued to prevent an inflationary impact on the domestic economy through increased cost of leather shoes.

On May 24, the Senate authorized the ninth fiscal budget for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The authorization of $5,008,000,000 will further our efforts to land astronauts on the moon and continue our scientific exploration of the solar system to expand our knowledge and activities in space.

I have been appointed to serve as one of the five Senate conferees to work out differences between the Senate and House versions.

Missouri Press Report

by Senator Edward V. Long

Missouri has won approval for $9,342,000 in community water and waste disposal system loans and grants during the 1966 fiscal year, the Farmers Home Administration has just announced.

Additional grants and loans totaling several million dollars have received tentative approval.

Across the nation, in 1961, the Farmers Home Administration received only 110 applications for water system loans.

By contrast, in the first six months of fiscal year 1966, the agency received 1,377 applications for water and sewer loans as compared to the 1,019 applications for the entire fiscal year 1965.

Under the program, rural communities up to 5,500 population are eligible for loans and grants. Loans can be made up to $4 million and grants can be made up to 50 percent of cost of construction.

It is estimated that there are some 30,000 rural communities that are still without central water supplies or adequate waste disposal systems.

The Senate has passed a $5 billion space authorization bill. Included in the bill is $2 billion for project Apollo -- the U.S. effort to land a man on the moon by 1970.

Visited the Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston, Texas, recently, where I saw the mission control center used for the current series of Gemini flights. Met with Astronaut Gordon Cooper who flew 14 days in Gemini V.

The Special Subcommittee on Aging has just held hearings on a bill to create a Talented American Senior Corps. Under this bill, elderly Americans would be given an opportunity to serve their communities, aid in the guidance and care of children, assist in schools and on playgrounds, work in hospitals and help in home repairs.

The bill recognizes that many of our senior citizens are willing and able to serve usefully and productively many years after retirement.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has just announced regional hearings to consider the level for Class I fluid milk prices for the period July - December, 1966. The Missouri meeting will be held in St. Louis and will cover the St. Louis, St. Louis Suburban, St. Joseph, Greater Kansas City, and Neosho Valley milk marketing orders. Date of the meeting is June 7.

Lucy tells off Charlie Brown during heat of a tense contest.

Charlie Brown Does It Again For TV--Loses

Charlie Brown preserves his perfect pitching record with 999 straight losses and faces the greatest crisis in his ill-fated baseball career in "Charlie Brown's All-Stars," color cartoon Special to be broadcast WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8 (8:30-9:00 p.m., EDT), on the CBS Television Network.

It is the second in a series of Charlie Brown Specials featuring the popular "Peanuts" comic strip characters and written by their creator, Charles Schulz. The first program, "A Charlie Brown Christmas," received a Peabody Award and was twice honored by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

When Charlie winds up his 999th game in a blaze of failure, the rest of the "Peanuts" gang, including Lucy, Linus, Schroeder, Frieda and Snoopy the interpid shortstop, are thoroughly disgusted and decide to quit baseball forever. They take off on a variety of springtime pursuits -- Snoopy goes surfing, Lucy and the girls take up skate-boarding -- leaving poor old Charlie Brown out in left field, alone and despondent.

Suddenly a local merchant offers to outfit the group in official uniforms and Charlie sees his chance to save the team. He persuades the All-Stars to return to his diamond for one more game. It is Charlie's finest hour -- almost.

Master jazz musician Vince Guaraldi, Grammy Award winner who composed and performed the original score for "A Charlie Brown Christmas," has created the musical backgrounds for "Charlie Brown's All-Stars."

Report From Washington

Paul C. Jones

By a vote of 303-93, the House of Representatives has passed and sent to the Senate H. R. 13712, to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act, more commonly known as the Wage-Hour law, after three days of consideration.

Since this Representative was one of the 93 who voted against this bill, I would like to take this opportunity of pointing out certain provisions of the bill which caused me to vote as I did. First, let me say I was not so much opposed to the increase in the minimum wage, as I was apprehensive of the extended coverage, which in my opinion goes too far, particularly as it relates to coverage and overtime provisions for so-called agricultural workers, though without question, the percentage increases in the minimum wage can have none other than an inflationary effect which in many instances will wipe out the increase in hourly rates. For those already covered, the minimum wage on February 1, 1967, will go from $1.25 an hour to $1.40 an hour, and then two years later will advance to $1.60 an hour. I stated on the floor that a more reasonable and logical increase would have been $1.35 an hour on February 1, 1967; $1.45 an hour a year later and a $1.60 two years later. This would have meant an 8 per cent increase the first step (more than twice that provided by the President's suggested guide lines), rather than the 15 per cent provided in the bill.

Tha radical increase in coverage by lowering the volume of business test from one million dollars a year to $250,000 a year, will have the effect of placing under coverage thousands of employees of small business, including both retail, service and manufacturing establishments, many of which in my opinion will be forced out of business, particularly those small independent retail establishments, which in the past have received preferential treatment over the chain store operation. Many of these businesses have been hiring many inexperienced and sub-standard employees, who in all likelihood will also be forced out of employment, since the employer when he has to pay the minimum of $1.40 and $1.60 an hour will confine his employment to the more efficient and more productive employees.

The same situation prevails in the field of agriculture and agricultural processing, where many of those who have been employed in the past will find it more difficult, if not impossible to find employment at the higher rates. Particularly will this be true among the unskilled and the handicapped workers, who I believe will eventually land on the relief rolls. When legislation is written by individuals who are not familiar with farm operations, and the handling and processing of agricultural commodities, they cannot have an understanding of some of the problems which will arise. Take, for instance, the case of the sharecropper, who has contract to share 50-50 with the landowner, who shares in the expense of producing a crop by furnishing seed, fertilizer, etc., and they both share in the crop on an equal basis in "boom" and "bust" times. Essex-Richland School Plans Summer Programs

ESSEX -- The Richland School District R-1 of Essex Gray Ridge, in cooperation with Title I of the National Elementary and Secondary Education Act, will offer to the pupils of the district a broad basic skills improvement program during an eight-week summer session, beginning June 6.

Any pupil in the school district, grades 1-12 inclusive, whose score on a nationally rated standardized test indicated a need for improvement in any of the basic skills of reading, language arts, mathemathcs, science, and social studies - history, to increase proficiency in any area to that accepted as normal for the pupils age and grade or proficiency in subject area for a high school pupil, is eligible to attend.

Letters have gone out to all parents who have children whom school officials, including principals, counselors, and teachers feel would benefit from attendance in this program.

There will be some recreational and cultural offerings to supplement the basic skills program to insure an enjoyable and profitable program for all pupils attending.

Busses will transport all pupils to and from school. Routes are being worked out for present enrollments and will be altered to pick up all pupils as the need arises.

Busses will begin to pick up pupils at 7 a.m. Monday, June 6. Busses will be on different routes and time schedules from the regular term. After enrollment is complete, busses will be able to set a definite schedule and route.

Classes will meet from 8 a.m. to noon. Lunch will be served at noon and school will be dismissed at the close of the lunch period, 12:30.

Lunch, school supplies, books and all costs will be furnished pupils. There will be no cost to any pupil to attend the session.

Classes will be small to permit individual instruction. Additional teaching materials and equipment is being furnished to improve each pupil chance for improvement at an accelerated rate.

This is a program designed to help pupils to become better prepared academically, physically and socially. A person may enroll by calling AV3-5318 for grades 1-8 and AV3-5332 for Grades 1-12.

The summer HEAD START program for Richland School District R-1 has been tentatively approved, and will begin on Monday, June 6, for an eight-week session.

Children who will be eligible to attend next year will be eligible to attend Head Start if they meet federal regulations on income.

Regulatons state that 90 per cent of the children in Head Start must come from families with incomes below $2500. for a non - farm family and $1,-500. for a farm family. There are other factors which permit acceptance of certain children so anyone interested in their child attending Head Start should bring the child to school on Monday, June 6, or call school official for further details to determine the eligibility of the child to attend.

A child must be six years old on or before September 30 to attend school at Richland next year, the same as previously, to Head Start this summer.

Children who have not already enrolled and presented their birth certificates for record purposes should be prepared to do so on the first day of HEAD START on June 6.

There are varying age limits being used by different schools for HEAD START just as the starting date for entering regular school varies.

The above dates are being used by the Richland District because a kindergarten program will be offered this fall to all children of the district who will be starting to school in 1967-68 and it would only result in duplication to permit younger children to attend this summer.

Busses will start to pick up children at 7 a.m. Classes will operate from 8 a.m. to noon. A mid - morning snack and lunch will be served to all children at no cost to the child.

For additional information or to register your child, call AV3-5332 or come by the Richland High School general office.

Elks Lodge Has New Members

Melvin Dotsins, William Leonard, Albert Marks, J. D. Schaffer of Sikeston and Price P. Thompson of New Madrid are the new members.

There will be a free dance Friday night from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. for members, guests and new initiates at the lodge.

GETS LEG ON LIFE

CLEVELAND, Tenn. AP - A prized red and brown hen belonging to Ben Keller recently lost a leg in an accident. Not wanting to kill the bird and lose a good egg layer, Keller made a peg leg of plastic and leather. The hen now struts about majestically and has even learned to scratch with the new leg.

BURGLARY INSIDE JAIL

HOUSTON, Miss. AP - Eight Chickasaw county prisoners held a party in jail here when they broke into a cell and got contraband booze that Sheriff Arnold Simpson had stored there. Using a broom to pry open the door, they pulled out a case of gin. Charges of petty larceny were added to the original charges for which they were jailed.

Essex-Richland School Plans Summer Programs

ESSEX -- The Richland School District R-1 of Essex Gray Ridge, in cooperation with Title I of the National Elementary and Secondary Education Act, will offer to the pupils of the district a broad basic skills improvement program during an eight-week summer session, beginning June 6.

Any pupil in the school district, grades 1-12 inclusive, whose score on a nationally rated standardized test indicated a need for improvement in any of the basic skills of reading, language arts, mathematics, science, and social studies - history, to increase proficiency in any area to that accepted as normal for the pupils age and grade or proficiency in subject area for a high school pupil, is eligible to attend.

Letters have gone out to all parents who have children whom school officials, including principals, counselors, and teachers feel would benefit from attendance in this program.

There will be some recreational and cultural offerings to supplement the basic skills program to insure an enjoyable and profitable program for all pupils attending.

Busses will transport all pupils to and from school. Routes are being worked out for present enrollments and will be altered to pick up all pupils as the need arises.

Busses will begin to pick up pupils at 7 a.m. Monday, June 6. Busses will be on different routes and time schedules from the regular term. After enrollment is complete, busses will be able to set a definite schedule and route.

Classes will meet from 8 a.m. to noon. Lunch will be served at noon and school will be dismissed at the close of the lunch period, 12:30.

Lunch, school supplies, books and all costs will be furnished pupils. There will be no cost to any pupil to attend the session.

Classes will be small to permit individual instruction. Additional teaching materials and equipment is being furnished to improve each pupil chance for improvement at an accelerated rate.

This is a program designed to help pupils to become better prepared academically, physically and socially. A person may enroll by calling AV3-5318 for grades 1-8 and AV3-5332 for Grades 1-12.

The summer HEAD START program for Richland School District R-1 has been tentatively approved, and will begin on Monday, June 6, for an eight-week session.

Children who will be eligible to attend next year will be eligible to attend Head Start if they meet federal regulations on income.

Regulatons state that 90 per cent of the children in Head Start must come from families with incomes below $2500. for a non - farm family and $1,500. for a farm family. There are other factors which permit acceptance of certain children so anyone interested in their child attending Head Start should bring the child to school on Monday, June 6, or call school official for further details to determine the eligibility of the child to attend.

A child must be six years old on or before September 30 to attend school at Richland next year, the same as previously, to Head Start this summer.

Children who have not already enrolled and presented their birth certificates for record purposes should be prepared to do so on the first day of HEAD START on June 6.

There are varying age limits being used by different schools for HEAD START just as the starting date for entering regular school varies.

The above dates are being used by the Richland District because a kindergarten program will be offered this fall to all children of the district who will be starting to school in 1967-68 and it would only result in duplication to permit younger children to attend this summer.

Busses will start to pick up children at 7 a.m. Classes will operate from 8 a.m. to noon. A mid - morning snack and lunch will be served to all children at no cost to the child.

For additional information or to register your child, call AV3-5332 or come by the Richland High School general office.

Hope to Make Soft Landing on Moon Thursday

By RALPH DIGHTON
Associated Press
Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. AP -- Surveyor 1, streaking toward a landing on the moon Thursday morning, carries not only a camera but this nation's hopes of making the first touchdown gentle enough for men to survive.

Surveyor is due to settle on a broad equatorial plain at 2:17 a.m. EDT and begin radioing pictures which will help scientists pick the safest areas for Apollo astronaut landings later in this decade.

If everything works, Surveyor will fire retro-rockets to break its approach speed from 6,100 miles an hour to 3 1/2 miles an hour, then drop gently the final 14 feet with less impact than a parachutist feels on earth.

The Soviet Union's ball-shaped Luna 9, which radioed the first pictures from the lunar surface last Feb. 3, apparently was ejected from a carrier vehicle at a height of several hundred feet.

"Information and pictures recently released in Moscow indicate the fall probably would have been fatal to an unprotected human," said Dr. Thomas Vrebalovich, of Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which is guiding Surveyor on its quarter-million-mile flight.

Dr. Vrebalovich, a Surveyor project scientist, said in an interview that the Luna 9 technique was similar to one abandoned by the U.S. space agency years ago.

He referred to the early Ranger shots, originally planned to drop instruments imbedded in balsa wood balls just before they crashed into the moon. The balls later were left off the spacecraft to allow more room for television cameras which radioed back history's first closeups of the moon as they plunged to destruction.

The Soviets have never disclosed just how Luna 9 was landed, but Dr. Vrebalovich said it was obvious the 200-pound ball carried no retro-rockets.

Monitoring of Soviet signals indicated that the carrier vehicle fired a retro-rocket about 40 miles above the lunar surface and shortly afterwards ejected the crushproof ball, which popped open on impact and started a camera, he said.

For Today From The Upper Room

The comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. (John 14:26)

PRAYER: Dear heavenly Father, we are grateful that Thou dost still promise the near presence of the Holy Spirit to all who repent and believe on Thy Son Jesus Christ. Give us the wisdom to keep our bodies as living temples, fit for his indwelling. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

It was learned later that someone had told the Japanese that the term meant okay.

Hope to Make Soft Landing on Moon Thursday

By RALPH DIGHTON
Associated Press
Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. AP -- Surveyor 1, streaking toward a landing on the moon Thursday morning, carries not only a camera but this nation's hopes of making the first touchdown gentle enough for men to survive.

Surveyor is due to settle on a broad equatorial plain at 2:17 a.m. EDT and begin radioing pictures which will help scientists pick the safest areas for Apollo astronaut landings later in this decade.

If everything works, Surveyor will fire retro-rockets to break its approach speed from 6,100 miles an hour to 3 1/2 miles an hour, then drop gently the final 14 feet with less impact than a parachutist feels on earth.

The Soviet Union's ball-shaped Luna 9, which radioed the first pictures from the lunar surface last Feb. 3, apparently was ejected from a carrier vehicle at a height of several hundred feet.

"Information and pictures recently released in Moscow indicate the fall probably would have been fatal to an unprotected human," said Dr. Thomas Vrebalovich, of Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which is guiding Surveyor on its quarter-million-mile flight.

Dr. Vrebalovich, a Surveyor project scientist, said in an interview that the Luna 9 technique was similar to one abandoned by the U.S. space agency years ago.

He referred to the early Ranger shots, originally planned to drop instruments imbedded in balsa wood balls just before they crashed into the moon. The balls later were left off the spacecraft to allow more room for television cameras which radioed back history's first closeups of the moon as they plunged to destruction.

The Soviets have never disclosed just how Luna 9 was landed, but Dr. Vrebalovich said it was obvious the 200-pound ball carried no retro-rockets.

Monitoring of Soviet signals indicated that the carrier vehicle fired a retro-rocket about 40 miles above the lunar surface and shortly afterwards ejected the crushproof ball, which popped open on impact and started a camera, he said.

For Today From The Upper Room

The comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. (John 14:26)

PRAYER: Dear heavenly Father, we are grateful that Thou dost still promise the near presence of the Holy Spirit to all who repent and believe on Thy Son Jesus Christ. Give us the wisdom to keep our bodies as living temples, fit for his indwelling. In Jesus' name we pray. Amen.

It was learned later that someone had told the Japanese that the term meant okay.

BIBLE WEEK POST—Don L. Jordan, board chairman of Johnson Carper Furniture Co. of Roanoke, Va., is chairman of the Special Gifts Committee for this fall's 26th annual National Bible Week. The all-faiths observance is the week of Oct. 17-23.

Today In U. S. History

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1813, Captain James Lawrence, mortally wounded, cried, "Don't give up the ship!" This came as he was taken from the deck of his American frigate, Chesapeake.

On this date

In 1792, statehood was granted to Kentucky.

In 1796, Tennessee was admitted to the Union.

In 1942, a giant armada of British Royal Air Force planes from Britain bombed the German industrial city of Essen.

In 1945, U.S. planes dropped about 3,000 tons of fire bombs on the Japanese stronghold of Osaka in a daylight raid.

In 1946, the Navy revealed the development of the so-called doodle-bug a device carried by planes to detect the presence of submarines under water.

Ten years ago -- It was announced that Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov had resigned. Molotov was an old Bolshevik, a holdover from the Stalin regime. Western observers were not surprised at his resignation.

Five years ago -- The ground caved in under a Parisian suburb, killing at least 20 persons and destroying at least 50 homes and apartment buildings.

One year ago -- President Johnson at a news conference defended the U.S. action of sending troops to Santo Domingo at the outbreak of a disorderly crisis in the Dominican Republic.

Convict Releases Hostages

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A man believed to be an escaped convict held a couple hostage Tuesday night for several hours in their farm home near Marion.

The Highway Patrol said Mr. and Mrs. Richard Snelling were not harmed and that their description of the man corresponded to that of Rahmond Paul Patrick, 41, a life termer from Monroe County, who escaped from the Church prison farm northwest of Jefferson City Sunday.

Marion is a short distance up the Missouri river from the prison farm on Rt. 41.

When the man left about 10:30 p. m. he took the Snelling car, a 1953 turquoise Ford, a shotgun and a rifle. He had been in the house since about 2 p. m. He held Mrs. Snelling captive until her husband came home from work about 5 o'clock.

Today In U. S. History

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1813, Captain James Lawrence, mortally wounded, cried, "Don't give up the ship!" This came as he was taken from the deck of his American frigate, Chesapeake.

On this date

In 1792, statehood was granted to Kentucky.

In 1796, Tennessee was admitted to the Union.

In 1942, a giant armada of British Royal Air Force planes from Britain bombed the German industrial city of Essen.

In 1945, U.S. planes dropped about 3,000 tons of fire bombs on the Japanese stronghold of Osaka in a daylight raid.

In 1946, the Navy revealed the development of the so-called doodle-bug a device carried by planes to detect the presence of submarines under water.

Ten years ago -- It was announced that Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov had resigned. Molotov was an old Bolshevik, a holdover from the Stalin regime. Western observers were not surprised at his resignation.

Five years ago -- The ground caved in under a Parisian suburb, killing at least 20 persons and destroying at least 50 homes and apartment buildings.

One year ago -- President Johnson at a news conference defended the U.S. action of sending troops to Santo Domingo at the outbreak of a disorderly crisis in the Dominican Republic.

Convict Releases Hostages

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A man believed to be an escaped convict held a couple hostage Tuesday night for several hours in their farm home near Marion.

The Highway Patrol said Mr. and Mrs. Richard Snelling were not harmed and that their description of the man corresponded to that of Rahmond Paul Patrick, 41, a life termer from Monroe County, who escaped from the Church prison farm northwest of Jefferson City Sunday.

Marion is a short distance up the Missouri river from the prison farm on Rt. 41.

When the man left about 10:30 p. m. he took the Snelling car, a 1953 turquoise Ford, a shotgun and a rifle. He had been in the house since about 2 p. m. He held Mrs. Snelling captive until her husband came home from work about 5 o'clock.

He was identified as George Veach, 39, serving a seven-year term from Audrain Count on a bad check conviction.

"never did water stand on this cornfield."

Sam is kept busy almost every minute of the day, taking long distance calls from his produce haulers in almost every state of the union. The report from his long distance haulers report good crops on the east and west coast lines, but they are running low, and leaves the middlewest a chance to come back with a late fall crop.

Tanksley will replant a new potato crop in July, for fall harvest, thereby making up for most of his early season losses.

He will also plant about 60 acres of lettuce, sometime in late July and early August, also for a fall shipment.

What he will do to recoup his watermelon crop remains to be seen, but if there is a chance for a later crop, he'll do something about it.

He is a man of perfection when it comes to raising produce. Over the years he has trucked thousands of tons of garden produce over the nation, and has learned much about the crop, so with any future degree of success he will come out on top in supplying produce by hauling produce the year around.

The Highway Commission last year announced its intention to hold public hearings throughout the state to provide citizens with an opportunity to voice their observations, criticisms and views about the state's road systems.

The Sikeston hearing will be the third scheduled by the commission since it began the project. Any southeast Missourian who wants to make observations or suggestions to the commission is invited to attend the public hearing, Mr. Riley noted.

Matthews Points Out Improved Crime Record

Scott county assistant prosecuting attorney Charles Matthews, member of a prominent family of Sikeston, explained problems of controlling crime in Scott County last night at the Kiwanis Meeting at the Holiday Inn.

Mr. Matthews brought out points of law that now apply to prosecution of persons who have committed a misdemeanor and those who have committed a felony.

The new Public Aid Office now proposed by Federal Law is detrimental to the judical system. It appears to be attractive in that it offers free legal aid to the poor, however, the ramifications are such that it would undermine those services presently being offered and performed by the bar association, Mr. Matthews said.

He was most complimentary toward the local Sikeston police department and the county sheriff's office. They are doing a good job despite the fact that the Scott County Sheriff's Office is operating now with the same number of men they had 10 years ago and the Sikeston police department with 16 men, is 6 men short of the national average for a town of this size.

Crime statistics quoted gave our county a good record primarily because of the money spent in Scott county which showed a lower record than the national average on juvenile delinquency.

Jim Stephenson served as president of the club in the absence of Pres. Lee Shell who was attending a banking school in Baton Rouge, La.

Guests of the club were Lieut. Gov. Ed Cannon of Dist. no. 12 and the three men accompanying him, from Poplar Bluff were, Buell Thompson, Harvey Anglin and Charles Cray.

Pat Lea's visitor was Geo. Dawling, architect from Little Rock, Ark.

Jones Lashes Out At Minimum Wage Bill

WASHINGTON AP -- Rep. Paul G. Jones, D-Mo., took a swipe at a bill to raise the minimum wage, saying the extended coverage goes too far, particularly as it relates to coverage and overtime provisions for "so - called agricultural workers."

Jones told constituents in a newsletter he was not so much opposed to the increase in the prehensive of the extended coverage.

The House passed the bill last week, 303-93, and sent it to the Senate. The bill would raise the minimum wage from $1.25 an hour to $1.40 Feb. 1 and to $1.60 on Feb. 1, 1969.

Jones voted against the bill. "The radical increase in coverage by lowering the volume of business test from $1,000,000 to $250,000 a year, will have the effect of placing under coverage thousands of employes of small business, including both retail, service and manufacturing establishments," he said.

Many of these businesses, he said, have been hiring a number of "inexperienced and sub-standard" employes who likely would be forced out of work since the employer, who would have to pay increased minimum wages, would confine employment to more efficient workers.

The same situation prevails in agriculture and agriculture processing where many of those who have been employed in the past will find it difficult, if not impossible, to find employment at the higher rates, Jones said.

Road Improvement Parley Scheduled Here June 11

The Missouri State Highway Commission will hold a public hearing at Sikeston June 11 to here views from residents of Southeast Missouri on the state road system.

A. C. "Dub" Riley of New Madrid, who represents southeast Missouri on the six-member state road board, said the hearing would be held at Sikeston high school at 10 a.m.

The Highway Commission last year announced its intention to hold public hearings throughout the state to provide citizens with an opportunity to voice their observations, criticisms and views about the state's road systems.

The Sikeston hearing will be the third scheduled by the commission since it began the project. Any southeast Missourian who wants to make observations or suggestions to the commission is invited to attend the public hearing, Mr. Riley noted.

Special notices are being mailed this week to southeast Missouri county court judges, road district commissioners and others connected with road building projects.

Matthews Points Out Improved Crime Record

Scott county assistant prosecuting attorney Charles Matthews, member of a prominent family of Sikeston, explained problems of controlling crime in Scott County last night at the Kiwanis Meeting at the Holiday Inn.

Mr. Matthews brought out points of law that now apply to prosecution of persons who have committed a misdemeanor and those who have committed a felony.

The new Public Aid Office now proposed by Federal Law is detrimental to the judical system. It appears to be attractive in that it offers free legal aid to the poor, however, the ramifications are such that it would undermine those services presently being offered and performed by the bar association, Mr. Matthews said.

He was most complimentary toward the local Sikeston police department and the county sheriff's office. They are doing a good job despite the fact that the Scott County Sheriff's Office is operating now with the same number of men they had 10 years ago and the Sikeston police department with 16 men, is 6 men short of the national average for a town of this size.

Crime statistics quoted gave our county a good record primarily because of the money spent in Scott county which showed a lower record than the national average on juvenile delinquency.

Jim Stephenson served as president of the club in the absence of Pres. Lee Shell who was attending a banking school in Baton Rouge, La.

Guests of the club were Lieut. Gov. Ed Cannon of Dist. no. 12 and the three men accompanying him, from Poplar Bluff were, Buell Thompson, Harvey Anglin and Charles Cray.

Pat Lea's visitor was Geo. Dawling, architect from Little Rock, Ark.

Craig In Kansas City

Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig is in Kansas City today to attend the Judicial Conference of Missouri that is to begin tomorrow for the 127 trial and appellate court judges of the state. The conference is to end Saturday.

Jones Lashes Out At Minimum Wage Bill

WASHINGTON AP -- Rep. Paul G. Jones, D-Mo., took a swipe at a bill to raise the minimum wage, saying the extended coverage goes too far, particularly as it relates to coverage and overtime provisions for "so - called agricultural workers."

Jones told constituents in a newsletter he was not so much opposed to the increase in the prehensive of the extended coverage.

The House passed the bill last week, 303-93, and sent it to the Senate. The bill would raise the minimum wage from $1.25 an hour to $1.40 Feb. 1 and to $1.60 on Feb. 1, 1969.

Jones voted against the bill. "The radical increase in coverage by lowering the volume of business test from $1,000,000 to $250,000 a year, will have the effect of placing under coverage thousands of employes of small business, including both retail, service and manufacturing establishments," he said.

Many of these businesses, he said, have been hiring a number of "inexperienced and sub-standard" employes who likely would be forced out of work since the employer, who would have to pay increased minimum wages, would confine employment to more efficient workers.

The same situation prevails in agriculture and agriculture processing where many of those who have been employed in the past will find it difficult, if not impossible, to find employment at the higher rates, Jones said.

WHY IS A SHORT BLANKET like Social Security-?

. . . Because it provides a limited amount of comfort, but seldom covers your needs completely.

That's why many folks are the proud owners of Jefferson Standard's Retirement Income Plan, which provides extra income to take care of the many needs, comforts and conveniences that Social Security seldom covers. Let me give you the details.

Charges Police Refused to Make Call, Left Car In Ditch; Auto Firm Flooded

DEXTER -- An automobile went off the road, into a ditch and stopped the flow of water under a bridge almost directly in front of the Estes Walker-Knight motor firm here May 23, and the resulting flood waters caused several hundred dollars worth of damage to the motor company, it was learned.

The car remained in the ditch, "plugging the hole" underneath the bridge throughout the remainder of the night, despite the fact that local police visited the scene briefly. They made no effort to call a local wrecker or to reach one of the owners of the Estes-Walker-Knight firm, H. L. (Bake) Estes said.

"If the police had just taken the trouble to call me, or to call any other wrecker, we could have averted all this damage", Estes said.

The car was being driven by a man identified as Freddie Truesdale, who was reportedly living a Bloomfield. He was not injured, but the 1963 Ford convertible which he was driving was badly damaged, mainly by water since the car stayed in the flooded ditch during the remainder of the night, Estes said.

Since the ditch was the "plugged" by the car, the water which fell during the rainstorm backed up onto the Estes-Walker-Knight lot, and into the building. The flood waters did several hundred dollars worth of damage to the body shop, alone, Estes said.

"If they (the police) had just taken a minute to call me, or one of my men, we would have been happy to have removed the car", Estes said. "Or", he added, "so would any other person with a wrecker in town".

No report of the accident or the resulting damage to the auto firm had been made by the local police when a Statesman staff member visited the police headquarters later last week.

Convention Ends Friday

DETROIT -- The Southern Baptist Convention ended here Friday. The Foreign Mission Session was Thursday night. The theme was "God's Word for a New Age." The missionaries present were called to the huge stage in Cobo Hall where each gave his name and where they will serve. There were two or three couples from Missouri.

Leaders in the field of religious music brought gospel messages in song to the packed Cobo Hall.

The Thursday night's sermon was delivered by the Rev. Baker J. Cauthern, executive secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of Richmond, Va. He stated that each messenger (delegate) there should ask himself, "Lord, what do you want me to do?" He gave his his own experience and history of his foreign service of how the Lord used him after letting him know what he wanted him to do. He was on the foreign field from 1938-1941. He said "I'm still a missionary and always will be even thought I serve now in the offices at Richmond, Va."

The Rev. James W. Hackney, pastor of the First Baptist church of Sikeston, Mo., said "My group had received many, many blessings from this great convention and I'm so proud that so many got to attend from First Church. I just wish it were possible for all my congregation to attend one of these Southern Baptist National Conentions."

Next year's convention will be in Miami Beach, Fla. and in 1971 it will be held in St. Louis.

QUICK QUIZ

A—No. This is one product which nature has produced better than man. Trees must be grown from seed to produce good maple sugar; second-growth wood has poor sugar sap.

Q—Where did the name avocado originate?

A—The tree is the oldest fruit crop in Florida, where it was introduced by the Spanish. Its Spanish name, "aguacate," sounds like "avocado" when it is spoken fast.

Q—What name is applied to the female fox?

A—Vixen.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am past 30, so please don't call me Toots or Lamb-Chop or any of your other cute names.

For the past three years I have been employed as a bookkeeper by a very good firm. I am in charge of the cash box, out of which I pay C. O. D.'s and other incidentals. The box contains $350 at all times-- or vouchers which account for the missing money. I am responsible for that amount.

Almost every Friday I take $35 or $50 from the cash box to play bingo or bet on a ball game or a golf match or some other sporting event. I'm not only an educated bettor, but a lucky one. I usually win. When I lose I repay the cash box from my savings account.

Yesterday the boss called me in and told me he had heard I borrowed money from the cash box to place bets. At that very moment the cash box balanced perfectly because just that morning I had repaid the $50 I had borrowed on Friday.

I'm furious that he would criticize me since I am responsible for the cash box and if I want to borrow from it, it's my business, isn't it? Yes or no?--LOUISVILLE

Dear L.: You have no right to borrow money from that box for a weekend, a day or even a minute. Why in the world don't you have a checking account, woman?

Almost every embezzler started out by "borrowing" from the company, just as you have been doing. Anyone who uses company money for his own purposes is inviting disaster and disaster invariably accepts the invitation.

Dear Ann Landers: Last Friday night we had a couple here for dinner. I had never met either the man or his wife before. He was transferred here and works for the same firm that employs my husband.

They arrived about 7:00 P.M. and we had cocktails. They were congenial and I liked them both. After dinner my husband took out his guitar. I played the piano and we all sang. Around 11:00 my husband suggested that we show the movies of our trip to Hawaii. They were thrilled at the idea.

When the movies were finished it was midnight. My husband suggested that they sleep at our house rather than drive to the suburbs -- about 45 minutes away. When they accepted I almost fainted.

I had a change the sheets and iron a pair of pajamas for the man to sleep in -- all this after midnight. I told my husband after they left the next noon that he had a nerve asking guests to stay overnight without first checking with me. He says I have no spirit of adventure and that the unexpected things in life are the most fun.

Am I a dead - head as he insists? -- VERONICA

Dear V.: I can think of things that are a lot more fun than changing sheets at midnight and ironing pajamas for people you met just that evening.

Your husband should not have asked them to stay and they should not have accepted. You say nothing of a hurricane, earthquake, blizzard, illness or too much liquor. You described them as "easy to know." If you ask me they are TOO easy to know. Cool it.

Gum Disease
by ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK AP - "Your gums should be as tough as a callus on your hand," said the dentist. "But most people don't know that yet."

Partly for that reason, Americans are victimized by a galloping, costly epidemic of gum disease, made all the more woeful because it can be stopped, and it can be prevented.

Second only perhaps to the commond cold in the millions of victims claimed, this saboteur is periodonta disease, meaning an affliction of the gums and bone and other tissues around the teeth.

In its major form, periodontal disease begins as gingivitis-inflammation of the gums--- but then can progress to destructive periodonitis, sometimes called pyorrhea.

A red-streaked toothbrush may be one early sign of gingivitis. Irritated gums become swollen and red, and retreat a bit from the teeth. Gums bleed easily. But they usually do not hurt, so it's easy to ignore this beginning of an insidious process.

As the disease progresses, little open pockets form between gums and teeth. They fill with food particles, with calculus or "tartar," and with germs. Inflammation spreads, reaching down to the roots of teeth. Gums recede. Tiny fibers of tissue anchoring the teeth break down, and bony tissue clamping the roots of teeth dissolves. Teeth loosen, and periodontitis is taking its full toll.

But the dentist can intervene before this all happens, and can act sooner if people are aware of danger signals of what is happening.

Teeth that fail to meet evenly when food is chewed set up uneven pressures and shocks adding to the injurious process.

In early stages, removal of the calculus and treatment of the "bite" can halt the process. With more advanced disease, the dentist must remove the pockets of infection. He may have to recontour the gumline surgically, re-forming it to fit the teeth more snugly. He may have to operate on bone tissue itself, correcting pockets stretching into the bony area, correcting bone deformities to re-establish healthy conditions between gums, teeth and supporting structures.

Then, as every person who has undergone corrective steps knows so well -- prevention lies mainly with the individual, through good habits of oral hygiene.

This means careful attention to brushing the teeth -- and brushing the gums as well-preferably after each meal. It means special care to remove food debris, and the natural or unnatural architecture of teeth and gums may call for extra steps with dental floss or special toothpicks and rinsing, according to a dentist's advice. It calls for massing or exercising the gums to keep them strong, tough and healthy, and regular consultations with the dentist for early removal hazards.

He was not injured, but the 1963 Ford convertible which he was driving was badly damaged, mainly by water since the car stayed in the flooded ditch during the remainder of the night, Estes said.

Since the ditch was the "plugged" by the car, the water which fell during the rainstorm backed up onto the Estes-Walker -Knight lot, and into the building. The flood waters did several hundred dollars worth of damage to the body shop, alone, Estes said.

"If they (the police) had just taken a minute to call me, or one of my men, we would have been happy to have removed the car", Estes said. "Or", he added, "so would any other person with a wrecker in town".

No report of the accident or the resulting damage to the auto firm had been made by the local police when a Statesman staff member visited the police headquarters later last week.

Convention Ends Friday

DETROIT -- The Southern Baptist Convention ended here Friday. The Foreign Mission Session was Thursday night. The theme was "God's Word for a New Age." The missionaries present were called to the huge stage in Cobo Hall where each gave his name and where they will serve. There were two or three couples from Missouri.

Leaders in the field of religious music brought gospel messages in song to the packed Cobo Hall.

The Thursday night's sermon was delivered by the Rev. Baker J. Cauthern, executive secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of Richmond, Va. He stated that each messenger (delegate) there should ask himself, "Lord, what do you want me to do?" He gave his his own experience and history of his foreign service of how the Lord used him after letting him know what he wanted him to do. He was on the foreign field from 1938-1941. He said "I'm still a missionary and always will be even thought I serve now in the offices at Richmond, Va."

The Rev. James W. Hackney, pastor of the First Baptist church of Sikeston, Mo., said "My group had received many, many blessings from this great convention and I'm so proud that so many got to attend from First Church. I just wish it were possible for all my congregation to attend one of these Southern Baptist National Conentions."

Next year's convention will be in Miami Beach, Fla. and in 1971 it will be held in St. Louis.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Are maple trees cultivated to produce superior maple sugar?

A—No. This is one product which nature has produced better than man. Trees must be grown from seed to produce good maple sugar; second-growth wood has poor sugar sap.

Q—Where did the name avocado originate?

A—The tree is the oldest fruit crop in Florida, where it was introduced by the Spanish. Its Spanish name, "aguacate," sounds like "avocado" when it is spoken fast.

Q—What name is applied to the female fox?

A—Vixen.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am past 30, so please don't call me Toots or Lamb-Chop or any of your other cute names.

For the past three years I have been employed as a bookkeeper by a very good firm. I am in charge of the cash box, out of which I pay C. O. D.'s and other incidentals. The box contains $350 at all times-- or vouchers which account for the missing money. I am responsible for that amount.

Almost every Friday I take $35 or $50 from the cash box to play bingo or bet on a ball game or a golf match or some other sporting event. I'm not only an educated bettor, but a lucky one. I usually win. When I lose I repay the cash box from my savings account.

Yesterday the boss called me in and told me he had heard I borrowed money from the cash box to place bets. At that very moment the cash box balanced perfectly because just that morning I had repaid the $50 I had borrowed on Friday.

I'm furious that he would criticize me since I am responsible for the cash box and if I want to borrow from it, it's my business, isn't it? Yes or no?--LOUISVILLE

Dear L.: You have no right to borrow money from that box for a weekend, a day or even a minute. Why in the world don't you have a checking account, woman?

Almost every embezzler started out by "borrowing" from the company, just as you have been doing. Anyone who uses company money for his own purposes is inviting disaster and disaster invariably accepts the invitation.

Dear Ann Landers: Last Friday night we had a couple here for dinner. I had never met either the man or his wife before. He was transferred here and works for the same firm that employs my husband.

They arrived about 7:00 P.M. and we had cocktails. They were congenial and I liked them both. After dinner my husband took out his guitar. I played the piano and we all sang. Around 11:00 my husband suggested that we show the movies of our trip to Hawaii. They were thrilled at the idea.

When the movies were finished it was midnight. My husband suggested that they sleep at our house rather than drive to the suburbs -- about 45 minutes away. When they accepted I almost fainted.

I had a change the sheets and iron a pair of pajamas for the man to sleep in -- all this after midnight. I told my husband after they left the next noon that he had a nerve asking guests to stay overnight without first checking with me. He says I have no spirit of adventure and that the unexpected things in life are the most fun.

Am I a dead - head as he insists? -- VERONICA

Dear V.: I can think of things that are a lot more fun than changing sheets at midnight and ironing pajamas for people you met just that evening.

Your husband should not have asked them to stay and they should not have accepted. You say nothing of a hurricane, earthquake, blizzard, illness or too much liquor. You described them as "easy to know." If you ask me they are TOO easy to know. Cool it.

Gum Disease

by ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK AP - "Your gums should be as tough as a callus on your hand," said the dentist. "But most people don't know that yet."

Partly for that reason, Americans are victimized by a galloping, costly epidemic of gum disease, made all the more woeful because it can be stopped, and it can be prevented.

Second only perhaps to the commond cold in the millions of victims claimed, this saboteur is periodonta disease, meaning an affliction of the gums and bone and other tissues around the teeth.

In its major form, periodontal disease begins as gingivitis-inflammation of the gums--- but then can progress to destructive periodonitis, sometimes called pyorrhea.

A red-streaked toothbrush may be one early sign of gingvitis. Irritated gums become swollen and red, and retreat a bit from the teeth. Gums bleed easily. But they usually do not hurt, so it's easy to ignore this beginning of an insidious process.

As the disease progresses, little open pockets form between gums and teeth. They fill with food particles, with calculus or "tartar," and with germs. Inflammation spreads, reaching down to the roots of teeth. Gums recede. Tiny fibers of tissue anchoring the teeth break down, and bony tissue clamping the roots of teeth dissolves. Teeth loosen, and periodontitis is taking its full toll.

But the dentist can intervene before this all happens, and can act sooner if people are aware of danger signals of what is happening.

Teeth that fail to meet evenly when food is chewed set up uneven pressures and shocks adding to the injurious process.

In early stages, removal of the calculus and treatment of the "bite" can halt the process. With more advanced disease, the dentist must remove the pockets of infection. He may have to recontour the gumline surgically, re-forming it to fit the teeth more snugly. He may have to operate on bone tissue itself, correcting pockets stretching into the bony area, correcting bone deformities to re-establish healthy conditions between gums, teeth and supporting structures.

Then, as every person who has undergone corrective steps knows so well -- prevention lies mainly with the individual, through good habits of oral hygiene.

This means careful attention to brushing the teeth -- and brushing the gums as well- preferably after each meal. It means special care to remove food debris, and the natural or unnatural architecture of teeth and gums may call for extra steps with dental floss or special toothpicks and rinsing, according to a dentist's advice. It calls for massing or exercising the gums to keep them strong, tough and healthy, and regular consultations with the dentist for early removal hazards.

Small Businessman Of The Year

JEFFERSON CITY AP - Joe H. Lambert of Chillicothe, who has a knack for making businesses prosper, was named Small Businessman of the Year in Missouri.

Presentation of the award was scheduled in the offices of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes. In prepared remarks, the governor said, "This award is presented for best exemplifying the imagination initiative, independence and integrity characteristic of America's millions of small businessmen."

Lambert, 54, is president of the Midwest Glove Corp. It has 160 employes.

May 22 to 28 is National Small Business Week. Candidates for state and national small business honors were selected by field offices of the Small Business Administration.

Lambert was born in Benton, in southeast Missouri. At 19 he became half owner of the Missouri Distributing Co. and sold sundries and dry goods from the back seat of an automobile. Fourteen years later the firm was using 44 trucks to deliver goods in 11 states.

In 1942, he became part owner of retail drug stores in Trenton, Brookfield, Kirksville and Chillicothe. He and his brother formed the Lambert Manufacturing Co. in 1945, making gloves and caps in four factories.

PICKLES A GO-GO

Pickles are like people on the go — you find them in the most unexpected places. And, like your favorite people — wherever you find them, they fit in and add to the pleasure of the occasion.

Take this new way to make sweet and sour spareribs. You wouldn't expect to find sweet mixed pickles in the recipe, but there they are, adding their own special flavor to some of the best spareribs you've ever tasted.

The ribs are as tender as a dream after baking an hour under a foil crimping and another half to three-quarters of an hour brushed with a sweet-sour sauce.

The sauce is a pleasing combination of the syrup from a jar of sweet mixed pickles and a can of pineapple chunks mixed with sugar and preserved ginger. Brush the spareribs with the sauce as they bake, then add the pickles, pineapple chunks, and a thinly sliced tomato to the sauce. Pour the whole concoction over the ribs at serving time to make as attractive a dish as you've ever set before your family on the go.

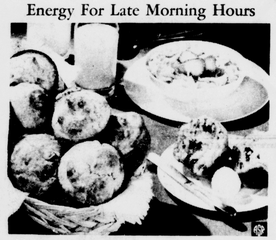
SWEET-SOUR SPARERIBS

- 4 pounds spareribs
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 jar (12 ounce) sweet mixed pickles
- 1 can (12½ ounce) pineapple chunks
- ¼ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons chopped preserved ginger
- 1 medium tomato, cut into thin wedges

Cut spareribs into 3- to 4-rib portions. Arrange ribs in shallow roasting pan. Cover with foil, crimping it securely to edges of pan. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 1 hour. Uncover; drain off drippings. Sprinkle with salt. While ribs are baking, prepare sauce. Drain pickles and pineapple chunks; save syrups. Combine syrups, sugar, cornstarch, and ginger; blend. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick and clear. Brush ribs with sauce. Return to oven and cook until ribs are tender, 30 to 45 minutes. Brush with sauce several times using ½ of the sauce. Add pickles and pineapple chunks to remaining sauce; heat. Just before serving, fold in tomato pieces and heat. Serve over ribs. Garnish with whole pineapple slices, if desired. Yield: 6 servings.

SWEET-SOUR SPARERIBS. Bits of mixed pickles and pineapple add glamour as well as a piquant flavor to these Sweet-Sour Spareribs. The recipe combines good eating with good nutrition for families on the go.

Energy For Late Morning Hours



It's hard to improve on a warm breakfast muffin filled with dates and nuts. This mealtime treat tastes even better, though, when uncooked hot whole wheat cereal is used in its preparation. The cereal contributes good grain flavor and texture. Bake these muffins a day ahead. They will then need only be warmed before serving with a quick basic breakfast of fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter. It is a wise morning choice. Scientific research, known as the Iowa Breakfast Studies, has demonstrated that a basic cereal and milk breakfast supplying ¼ of the day's calories and protein is superior in maintaining mental and physical efficiency, in the late morning hours, when compared to larger or smaller morning meals.

A Cool Party With Coffee Punch

Southern hostesses are known for their gracious hospitality — and with good reason. The spirit of "open house" is always in the air and the shady veranda is a standing invitation for refreshments and relaxation. The soft spoken hostess, just as if she's read your thoughts, places a cup of coffee or frosty punch in your hand. Soon you are at least ten degrees cooler and much, much happier.

Whether it's an improvised get-together when friends stop by or an elegantly planned community affair, hot humid days call for the thirst-quenching magic of Southern Coffee Punch. The secret of this delightfully refreshing drink is cool, deep flavored coffee combined with vanilla ice cream.

With weddings and graduations cropping up, southern belles from Savannah to New Orleans will choose this coffee cooler for their buffet table. Incidentally, when it comes to partying most of us seem to be southerners at heart. If you're faced with warm weather entertaining, no matter where you may be, keep it cool with Southern Coffee Punch.

Southern Coffee Punch

2 quarts strong cold coffee
1 pint cold milk
2 teaspoons vanilla
½ cup sugar
1 quart vanilla ice cream
½ pint heavy cream, whipped
Nutmeg

Combine cold coffee, milk, vanilla and sugar in large bowl. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Chill thoroughly. At serving time, pour over ice cream in punch bowl and top with whipped cream. Sprinkle lightly with nutmeg. Makes 15 to 18 punch cup servings.

Go-Go-Go Scotch Fudge Teen Delight

Here's a great foolproof butterscotch fudge for teeners — and they can do it themselves, Mom. There's no measuring (ingredients go straight from containers to cookery with nary a measuring cup). There's no fancy work with candy thermometers. There are only three ingredients in Go-Go-Go Scotch Fudge and they all work to the best advantage. The first ingredient, butterscotch flavored morsels, blends with the second ingredient, peanut butter, to create a wonderfully rich and different flavor big and little kids will go for. Sweetened condensed milk, the third ingredient, gives the fudge a smooth, creamy texture that won't get grainy.

Go-Go-Go Scotch Fudge

2 6-ounce packages (2 cups) butterscotch flavored morsels
1 12-ounce jar (1¼ cups) peanut butter
1 14-ounce can (1¼ cups) sweetened condensed milk

Combine butterscotch morsels and peanut butter in top of double boiler. Place over hot (not boiling) water; stir until butterscotch melts and mixture is smooth. Remove from water. Add sweetened condensed milk; stir until well blended. Turn into foil-lined 8-inch square pan. Chill until firm. Cut in 1-inch squares. Store in covered container. YIELD: 64 pieces.

New Do-It-Yourself Spring Salad

Perfect for a picnic or potluck supper or patio entertaining. "Lazy Susan Salad" is strictly an assemble-your-own salad for leisurely eating on a warm day.

All the ingredients — ham, marinated vegetables, cottage cheese, onion rings, lettuce wedges and creamy dressing — are right there on a big platter awaiting your pleasure.

A few serving tips: Use the outer leaves of the western iceberg lettuce as attractive "cups" for the other foods. Refrigerate for at least one hour the vegetables — cooked cauliflowerettes, carrots, lima beans or whatever your choice — so that their marinade of corn oil and vinegar can "go to work." And chill the dressing of sprightly seasoned dairy sour cream and real mayonnaise to allow time for proper blending of flavors.

Lazy Susan Salad

1 cup dairy sour cream
½ cup real mayonnaise
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon onion powder
8 wedges western iceberg lettuce
3 cups cooked vegetables, marinated in corn oil, vinegar and seasonings to taste
1 cup red onion rings
1 pint cottage cheese
2 cups julienne cooked ham

Blend sour cream with mayonnaise, lemon juice, mustard, salt and onion powder. Place in bowl in center of large round platter. Arrange lettuce wedges alternately with marinated vegetables, onion rings, cheese and ham around edge of platter. Makes 8 servings.

PICKLES A GO-GO

Pickles are like people on the go—you find them in the most unexpected places. And, like your favorite people—wherever you find them, they fit in and add to the pleasure of the occasion.

Take this new way to make sweet and sour spareribs. You wouldn't expect to find sweet mixed pickles in the recipe, but there they are, adding their own special flavor to some of the best spareribs you've ever tasted.

The ribs are as tender as a dream after baking an hour under a foil crimping and another half to three-quarters of an hour hushed with a sweet-sour sauce.

The sauce is a pleasing combination of the syrup from a jar of sweet mixed pickles and a can of pineapple chunks mixed with sugar and preserved ginger. Brush the spareribs with the sauce as they bake, then add the pickles, pineapple chunks, and a thinly sliced tomato to the sauce. Pour the whole concoction over the ribs at serving time to make as attractive a dish as you've ever set before your family on the go.

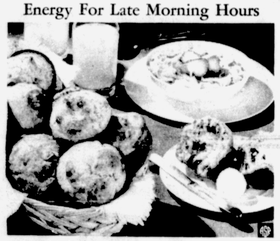
SWEET-SOUR SPARERIBS

- 4 pounds spareribs
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 jar (12 ounce) sweet mixed pickles
- 1 can (13½ ounce) pineapple chunks
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons chopped preserved ginger
- 1 medium tomato, cut into thin wedges

Cut spareribs into 3- to 4-rib portions. Arrange ribs in shallow roasting pan. Cover with foil, crimping it securely to edges of pan. Bake in moderate oven (375 °F.) 1 hour. Uncover; drain off drippings. Sprinkle with salt. While ribs are baking, prepare sauce. Drain pickles and pineapple chunks; save syrups. Combine syrups, sugar, cornstarch, and ginger; blend. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick and clear. Brush ribs with sauce. Return to oven and cook until ribs are tender, 30 to 45 minutes. Brush with sauce several times using ½ of the sauce. Add pickles and pineapple chunks to remaining sauce; heat. Just before serving, fold in tomato pieces and heat. Serve over ribs. Garnish with whole pineapple slices, if desired. Yield: 6 servings.

SWEET-SOUR SPARERIBS. Bits of mixed pickles and pineapple add glamour as well as a piquant flavor to these Sweet-Sour Spareribs. The recipe combines good eating with good nutrition for families on the go.

Energy For Late Morning Hours



It's hard to improve on a warm breakfast muffin filled with dates and nuts. This mealtime treat tastes even better, though, when uncooked hot whole wheat cereal is used in its preparation. The cereal contributes good grain flavor and texture. Bake these muffins a day ahead. They will then need only be warmed before serving with a quick basic breakfast of fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter. It is a wise morning choice. Scientific research, known as the Iowa Breakfast Studies, has demonstrated that a basic cereal and milk breakfast supplying ¼ of the day's calories and protein is superior in maintaining mental and physical efficiency, in the late morning hours, when compared to larger or smaller morning meals.

Four Men To Be Honored By Missouri University

The University of Missouri at Columbia will confer honorary degrees upon four of its former students as a part of the program for the 124th annual commencement exercises June 7, Chancellor John W. Schwada announced here today.

The recipients will be James A. Finch Jr., justice of the Missouri Supreme Court, who will be the Commencement speaker, and Ward A. Barnes, superintendent of schools of the Normandy School District, both of whom will receive Doctor of Law degrees; Harry F. Barr, vice president in charge of engineering staff for General Motors, and Douglas Ensminger, Ford Foundation representative in India since 1953, who will received Doctor of Scence degrees.

Mr. Barnes is married to the former Miss Juliamma Marshall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A.H. Marshall of Charleston. He is the nephew of Mrs. Moore Greer of Sikeston.

Judge Finch, named to the Supreme Court last year, long has been identified with the University through serving from 1951 until 1965 as a member of the Board of Curators and as president of the Board for 10 years.

A native of St. Louis who was reared in southeast Missouri, Judge Finch was graduated with scholastic honors from the University's College of Arts and Science in 1930 and School of Law in 1932. He previously attended Southeast Missouri State College at Cape Girardeau, where he returned to establish his law practice.

BARNES, NATIVE of Webster City, Ia., has spent 36 years in the Normandy School District, 17 as elementary principal and 19 as superintendent, and previously was an instructor for three years at the University and a rural school teacher for a year in St. Louis County. He is a graduate of Northwest Missouri State College at Maryville and took his master's at Missouri University.

He has been president of the Missouri State teachers Association, Missouri Association of School Administrators, St. Louis County Teachers Association, and Cooperating Superintendents and School Boards of St. Louis County and is a curator of Central Methodist College at Fayette. He has received gubernatorial appointments to the interim study committee on education and the commission to study education beyond the high school, and was chairman of the committee which drafted the junior college law.

Barnes received the "Page-One Civic Award" in 1963 of the St. Louis Newspaper Guild for his work in establishing the University of Missouri at St. Louis in Normandy and that year he represented the United States as a guest, with other superintendents, of the Swedish government and Swedish industry for a five-week study of Swedish education.

ENSMINGER, NATIVE of Stover, received agriculture and master degrees (in rural public welfare) at Missouri U. before taking his doctorate at Cornell University.

Dr. Ensminger gave the first Dag Hammarskjold Memorial Lecture at Columbia University and is author and co-author of a number of books on rural life, community development, and India. He is chairman of the board of governors of the American International School at New Delhi.

BARR, A NATIVE of Enid, Okla., studied mechanical engineering at M.U. before taking a bachelor's degree in automotive engineering in 1929 at the University of Detroit. He has been with General Motors in various capacities since that time.

He formerly was chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor Division for seven years, and assistant chief engineer both for Cadillac and Chevrolet.

Military Personnel Discriminated Again In Parcel Post Laws

The discriminatory effects of present parcel post laws affecting military personnel, were pointed out today by Pleas Malcolm on behalf of the National Association of Postmasters.

"Parents in Sikeston cannot mail larger or bulkier parcels to sons and daughters at hundreds of military installations served by first class post offices in the United States," Mr. Malcolm, who is postmaster of Sikeston, Missouri, declared.

Mr. Malcolm said this discriminatory treatment -- which does not apply to parents in small communities -- was pointed out in an analysis of present corrective legislation before Congress by President James O'Toole of the National Association of Postmasters in Washington, D. C.

In speaking as a representative of the Association, Mr. Malcolm listed some typical discrimatory situations in which the restrictive parcel limitations can apply for mail going to or from military personnel at many points.

1. A civic group collects gifts for the local people in military service -- such as records, canned food specialities, some types of clothing for civilian wear, etc., but cannot send it as a single parcel because it weighs more than 20 pounds. If sent, it must be broken up into two or more parcels at greater cost and with resulting inconvenience.

2. A group of local men away in military service ask to be sent records, a record player, and similar items for their camp club -- but it cannot be sent by parcel post.

3. Parents want to send some new luggage for a son to use on furlough, putting some books and personal effects in it. It cannot go by parcel post because it is too heavy or too bulky.

4. A local women's group organizes a drive for candy, cakes and gifts for a dozen local boys away at a military installation. It is likely to be too big a package to go by parcel post.

Similar limitations apply on parcels mailed home at first class post offices by military personnel. Mr. Malcolm said:

"At the same time, at any nearby smaller second, third or fourth class post office the same parcels can be sent because these post offices have a 70 pound, 100 inch limitation. Mailers on rural routes out of first class post offices also have this right."

"As a result of legislation effective in 1952, enacted to favor Railway Express Agency, parcels going between first class post offices (those in large cities) 150 miles or more apart are restricted to 20 pound and 72 inch dimensions," the National Association's Representative said.

If the first class post offices are less than 150 miles apart, the limitations are 40 pounds and 72 inches, he noted.

Hundreds of such first class offices serving Army posts, camps and stations and Air Force Bases, fields and installations are listed in the Directory of Post Offices.

Corrective legislation passed the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, with the number H. R. 14904. A 17 to 3 vote for the bill indicates an excellent chance of passage in Congress, Mr. Malcolm said.

He said reports disseminated by the express agency that the legislation would deprive REA employees of jobs were not correct.

"President O'Toole of the National Association has advised me," Mr. Malcolm said, "that the Department has expressed complete willingness to rehire any REA employees who might lose their jobs under this legislation -- although the Association emphasizes there is no basis in the first place for any such fears of job losses as a result of this bill."

In addition to ending discriminatory provisions against mailings between first class post offices -- applying to regular military personnel in this country and to mailings of civilians -- the bill provides about $107 million in additional revenue through moderate rate increases to prevent a parcel post deficit.

Four I-55 Jobs in Program

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- A work and right of way program for interstate, primary and urban highway projects in southeast Missouri for the next fiscal year includes continued I-55 development in Pemiscot and New Madrid counties and a Highway 61 improvement in Sikeston.

Plans for the fiscal year beginning July 1 as released by the State Highway Department are for a $128,248,000 statewide program extending over 468.6 miles.

Three I-55 projects, which stretch end to end from the present terminal point south of New Madrid to a point south of Hayti, are slated for work this year. Together, the three projects account for 27.6 miles.

The state plans to begin construction -- grading, bridging and paving -- of a 14-mile section extending southward from the present end of I-55.

This will take the superhighway into Pemiscot County by about two miles.

I-55 BYPASS

A 4.2 mile Hayti bypass for I-55 is also planned for the coming year.

Other interstate work slated in the district involves I-57 and I-53, a spur which is to connect I-55 at Hayti with the Mississipi River near Caruthersville.

A project to fence 12.3 miles of I-57 from Sikeston to east of Charleston is scheduled for next year.

The I-55 project will involve right of way acquisition for the 10.3 mile highway.

The only urban project on next year's schedule is for Highway 61 in Sikeston, which will be widened to four lanes from Business Route 61 to Highway 62, a distance of 1.8 miles.

Primary system work in the next fiscal year includes two jobs on Highway 25 and one on Highway 62.

The balance of right of way for a 2.5 mile Highway 25 project through Bernie will be acquired and the grading, paving, lighting and signal installation will be started.

The remainder of right of way also will be acquired for a six mile Highway 25 project from Route V to Route F in Dunklin County.

A bridge extension will be made on Highway 62 in New Madrid County.

Lightest Mexico

by John Abney

Mexico City - The National Confederation of Chambers of Commerce has in effect called on the Mexican Government to halt further influx of foreign capital into Mexico's organized business.

The Confederation, in a letter to the Ministry of Industry and Commerce, said that "the commercial sector should be protected by the authorities via action which opposes all new foreign investment in the national business field."

These efforts to avoid further competition from foreign investment in general business fields here came to light when the Confederation made known an interchange of letters on the problem between the Confederation president Armando Fernandez and the Ministry's Ernesto Ramirez Solano, Director General of business operations.

The Confederation took its action following a petition by nine member firms which "expressed their fears of the possible adverse competition they would face with the establishment here of a very important foreign-owned department store chain.'

While no mention was made of the organization in question, it is believed the reference is made to the J.C. Penny Co. of the United States, which is considering operations in Mexico.

The Confederation organization said that foreign capital should not be allowed into a Mexican business sector "which is sufficiently well attended by existing national investments."

Ramirez Solano, in referring to the Confederation, said that the Ministry understood the concern of that organization but also discussed at length the various regulations, written and unwritten, covering foreign investment in Mexico.

He added that his office would like to discuss the matter further with the Confederation officials "to resolve this particular situation."

But at the same time he stressed that as far as organized business in Mexico is concerned, foreign investment entering this field will be considered (by government authorities) in the same light as foreign investment in any of a number of other diverse economic sectors where such investment is not already specifically excluded by law.

Ramirez Solano also said that such foreign capital has every right to establish itself in Mexico, although adding that the government would prefer its entry into the market here on a "mixed capital" basis. In other words, in association with national investors.

The Confederation said there is no need for new foreign investments in the Mexican business sector. It maintained that "we now operate a modern agile and efficient distribution and sales apparatus and plan further modernization, expansion, new investments and better marketing techniques."

Despite the Confederation's petition against more foreign capital, the experts point out that investments are protected by the Mexican government, which still is encouraging the influx of foreign capital in certain fields.

Four Men To Be Honored By Missouri University

The University of Missouri at Columbia will confer honorary degrees upon four of its former students as a part of the program for the 124th annual commencement exercises June 7, Chancellor John W. Schwada announced here today.

The recipients will be James A. Finch Jr., justice of the Missouri Supreme Court, who will be the Commencement speaker, and Ward A. Barnes, superintendent of schools of the Normandy School District, both of whom will receive Doctor of Law degrees; Harry F. Barr, vice president in charge of engineering staff for General Motors, and Douglas Ensminger, Ford Foundation representative in India since 1953, who will received Doctor of Scence degrees.

Mr. Barnes is married to the former Miss Juliamma Marshall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A.H. Marshall of Charleston. He is the nephew of Mrs. Moore Greer of Sikeston.

Judge Finch, named to the Supreme Court last year, long has been identified with the University through serving from 1951 until 1965 as a member of the Board of Curators and as president of the Board for 10 years.

A native of St. Louis who was reared in southeast Missouri, Judge Finch was graduated with scholastic honors from the University's College of Arts and Science in 1930 and School of Law in 1932. He previously attended Southeast Missouri State College at Cape Girardeau, where he returned to establish his law practice.

BARNES, NATIVE of Webster City, Ia., has spent 36 years in the Normandy School District, 17 as elementary principal and 19 as superintendent, and previously was an instructor for three years at the University and a rural school teacher for a year in St. Louis County. He is a graduate of Northwest Missouri State College at Maryville and took his master's at Missouri University.

He has been president of the Missouri State teachers Association, Missouri Association of School Administrators, St. Louis County Teachers Association, and Cooperating Superintendents and School Boards of St. Louis County and is a curator of Central Methodist College at Fayette. He has received gubernatorial appointments to the interim study committee on education and the commission to study education beyond the high school, and was chairman of the committee which drafted the junior college law.

Barnes received the "Page-One Civic Award" in 1963 of the St. Louis Newspaper Guild for his work in establishing the University of Missouri at St. Louis in Normandy and that year he represented the United States as a guest, with other superintendents, of the Swedish government and Swedish industry for a five-week study of Swedish education.

ENSMINGER, NATIVE of Stover, received agriculture and master degrees (in rural public welfare) at Missouri U. before taking his doctorate at Cornell University.

Dr. Ensminger gave the first Dag Hammarskjold Memorial Lecture at Columbia University and is author and co-author of a number of books on rural life, community development, and India. He is chairman of the board of governors of the American International School at New Delhi.

BARR, A NATIVE of Enid, Okla., studied mechanical engineering at M.U. before taking a bachelor's degree in automotive engineering in 1929 at the University of Detroit. He has been with General Motors in various capacities since that time.

He formerly was chief engineer of the Chevrolet Motor Division for seven years, and assistant chief engineer both for Cadillac and Chevrolet.

Military Personnel Discriminated Again In Parcel Post Laws

The discriminatory effects of present parcel post laws affecting military personnel, were pointed out today by Pleas Malcolm on behalf of the National Association of Postmasters.

"Parents in Sikeston cannot mail larger or bulkier parcels to sons and daughters at hundreds of military installations served by first class post offices in the United States," Mr. Malcolm, who is postmaster of Sikeston, Missouri, declared.

Mr. Malcolm said this discrimatory treatment -- which does not apply to parents in small communities -- was pointed out in an analysis of present corrective legislation before Congress by President James O'Toole of the National Association of Postmasters in Washington, D. C.

In speaking as a representative of the Association, Mr. Malcolm listed some typical discrimatory situations in which the restrictive parcel limitations can apply for mail going to or from military personnel at many points.

1. A civic group collects gifts for the local people in military service -- such as records, canned food specialities, some types of clothing for civilian wear, etc., but cannot send it as a single parcel because it weighs more than 20 pounds. If sent, it must be broken up into two or more parcels at greater cost and with resulting inconvenience.

2. A group of local men away in military service ask to be sent records, a record player, and similar items for their camp club -- but it cannot be sent by parcel post.

3. Parents want to send some new luggage for a son to use on furlough, putting some books and personal effects in it. It cannot go by parcel post because it is too heavy or too bulky.

4. A local women's group organizes a drive for candy, cakes and gifts for a dozen local boys away at a military installation. It is likely to be too big a package to go by parcel post.

Similar limitations apply on parcels mailed home at first class post offices by military personnel. Mr. Malcolm said:

"At the same time, at any nearby smaller second, third or fourth class post office the same parcels can be sent because these post offices have a 70 pound, 100 inch limitation. Mailers on rural routes out of first class post offices also have this right."

Bloomfield Lions Club Installs Officers

BLOOMFIELD - Installation ceremonies highlighted the regular Tuesday morning meeting of the Bloomfield Lions Club. Amid regular business activities new officers for the coming year were sworn into office. Past President Les Brown will officially hand the gavel to the new president, Bloyce Unger, at the next Lion meeting. Slated to serve with Mr. Unger will be Bill Cowgur, secretary-treasurer; Jesse Kelley, 1st vice president; Harold Jones, 2nd vice president; Bill Woods, Lion Tamer and Jim Walker, Tail Twister.

Unger upon being sworn in pledged a continuation of the club toward the betterment of this area and the continuation of the high standards that the club has achieved in state and local projects.

The standards of Lionism were raised and recognized statewide recently when the Bloomfield club donated $500 to the University of Missouri Eye Bank project. This donation was accomplished through the proceeds of the Globetrotter basketball game held in April by the local club. The support of this project depends entirely upon donations received from Lions clubs throughout the state of Missouri.

The club gained another member with the acceptance of Ronnie Wiggs. Mr. Wiggs is a Bloomfield businessman associated with the Wiggs Insurance Agency.

Navy Serviceman Attempts To Sell Secret Information

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON AP -- A Navy serviceman assigned to routine duties in a "top secret" area methodically collected highly sensitive information and tried to sell it to the Soviets, it was learned today.

As a result, the Navy is tightening its security system around the world.

The Navy turned aside all questions about the case by saying that it is "under active investigation" and that "other details are classified."

Since the man involved held a secret clearance, it can be assumed that he had undergone a fairly stringent security check beforehand.

There was no indication of the specific nature of the material he tried to sell or whether the Soviets bought it. On these points, too, the Navy refused to talk.

The previously undisclosed case came to light in a notice to all ships and stations signed by Rear Adm. Rufus L. Taylor, director of the Office of Naval Intelligence.

The notice was intended, it said, to advise commanders "of the danger inherent in our present security system whereby an individual who has access to secret information may, through the peculiar nature of his duties, gain access to top sceret information without an appropriate clearance."

It went on to say that "as a result of a recent case involving the compromise of classified material, a weakness in our security system was brought to the attention of the chief of naval operations."

Then it told the story, without giving any names or indication of where the espionage incident occurred.

It said a serviceman who had duties as a "watch stander," officer supply clerk, and repairman was placed on a list permitting access to spaces where top secret information was discussed.

As a result of his frequent appearances in the sensitive spaces, the notice said "authorized personnel assumed that he held a top secret clearance."

Further, the commanders were told, the authorized personnel "failed to challenge his need-to-know.

"Through observation and pertinent questions, the serviceman managed to collect and collate information classified top secret," it added.

"In this case he contacted the Soviets with the intent of engaging in espionage for a monetary gain."

An average of more than 25,000 ships arrive and depart annually from the port of New York, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

FREE ENTERPRISE AND THE GOLDEN RULE

It is difficult to say what a man is worth who can guide a great enterprise to success. There are few men with such capacity. The directors of most com city. Thedirectors of most and bonuses to the men they want, because that is the only way to get top quality men. When high emoluments are freely offered to a man he can hardly be criticized for accepting them, any more than popular actors or singers can be criticized for accepting the rewards that are freely offered them. Less highly gifted management would undoubtedly result in fewer jobs, poorly paid jobs, or no jobs.

Futhermore, wise managers, owners and labor will share their success with the public in the form of lower prices. This will widen the market and make possible greater success for the company, those who own it and those who labor in it. The best and most equitable way to distribute the benefits resulting from more efficient means of production, is in the form of lower prices benefiting all the people. But where labor, management and owners demand it all, and exclude the public from participation in it through lower prices, their selfishness will result in a smaller degree of success than the company otherwise might achieve. Fairness as well as self interest demands that the public receive a part of whatever savings can be made by the introduction of more efficient means of production. Lower prices and ever widening markets mean an expanding prosperity for all segments of the population. Any attempt to shut out the public from sharing in industrial and technological advance, by demanding that all possible benefits be paid to labor, management or owners, is self defeating and will retard a general advance in the standard of living for all people.

And so we come right back to the golden rule: Whatever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them. The religious precepts and maxims which the saints and the prophets of all ages have enunciated and which are better set forth in the Old and New Testaments of the Bible than in any other place are, after all is said and done, the best rules by which to govern our conduct. This is the only way to a peaceable, prosperous, free and self governing society.

Bloomfield Lions Club Installs Officers

BLOOMFIELD - Installation ceremonies highlighted the regular Tuesday morning meeting of the Bloomfield Lions Club. Amid regular business activities new officers for the coming year were sworn into office. Past President Les Brown will officially hand the gavel to the new president, Bloyce Unger, at the next Lion meeting. Slated to serve with Mr. Unger will be Bill Cowgur, secretary-treasurer; Jesse Kelley, 1st vice president; Harold Jones, 2nd vice president; Bill Woods, Lion Tamer and Jim Walker, Tail Twister.

Unger upon being sworn in pledged a continuation of the club toward the betterment of this area and the continuation of the high standards that the club has achieved in state and local projects.

The standards of Lionism were raised and recognized statewide recently when the Bloomfield club donated $500 to the University of Missouri Eye Bank project. This donation was accomplished through the proceeds of the Globetrotter basketball game held in April by the local club. The support of this project depends entirely upon donations received from Lions clubs throughout the state of Missouri.

The club gained another member with the acceptance of Ronnie Wiggs. Mr. Wiggs is a Bloomfield businessman associated with the Wiggs Insurance Agency.

Navy Serviceman Attempts To Sell Secret Information

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON AP -- A Navy serviceman assigned to routine duties in a "top secret" area methodically collected highly sensitive information and tried to sell it to the Soviets, it was learned today.

The Navy turned aside all questions about the case by saying that it is "under active investigation" and that "other details are classified."

Since the man involved held a secret clearance, it can be assumed that he had undergone a fairly stringent security check beforehand.

There was no indication of the specific nature of the material he tried to sell or whether the Soviets bought it. On these points, too, the Navy refused to talk.

The previously undisclosed case came to light in a notice to all ships and stations signed by Rear Adm. Rufus L. Taylor, director of the Office of Naval Intelligence.

The notice was intended, it said, to advise commanders "of the danger inherent in our present security system whereby an individual who has access to secret information may, through the peculiar nature of his duties, gain access to top sceret information without an appropriate clearance."

It went on to say that "as a result of a recent case involving the compromise of classified material, a weakness in our security system was brought to the attention of the chief of naval operations."

Then it told the story, without giving any names or indication of where the espionage incident occurred.

It said a serviceman who had duties as a "watch stander," officer supply clerk, and repairman was placed on a list permitting access to spaces where top secret information was discussed.

As a result of his frequent appearances in the sensitive spaces, the notice said "authorized personnel assumed that he held a top secret clearance."

Further, the commanders were told, the authorized personnel "failed to challenge his need-to-know.

"Through observation and pertinent questions, the serviceman managed to collect and collate information classified top secret," it added.

"In this case he contacted the Soviets with the intent of engaging in espionage for a monetary gain."
